"I love this guy. If I could give Carl a mug that says "Worlds best boss" I would have done it by now, its a shame the scalpers seem to have snagged them all.

He seems to care for the folks he works with as well as a community.

The guy that goes above and beyond, pulls the all nighters, comes in his off days, your right hand man.

It makes me wonder.

If he lost his place, what would he be?

Endless work is rewarding, but I sure hope he finds some compassion in other things, such as love, family, and even himself.

But perhaps I'm thinking too much into it. People love him, his boss might not share eye to eye but I believe thats the point in these relationships.

I'd rate him five star. Great guy."-Luden

You also joined a bunch of Maoist indoctrination sessions? Maoism? I thought you were communist? What is it with you aliens having inconsistent naming? Then you became the lead of computers after you used advantage of a bunch of purges. I wish you were purged, then I hadn't had the

I don't think that in a monarchy voting happens, but maybe I'm expecting too much intelligence for an alien. After you became leader, you lead as an authoritarian and totalitarian leader, and purged a lot of political opponents. Normally I would support you for killing people of your own pathetic species, but then I remember that I still need some of you alive so I can sacrifice your souls so I can revive our great gods so they can restore glorious Ultra-Galactica. You also abolished 'Special Economic Zones'? So your species finally admit that 'economics' is a farce you made up to weaken us. The last part of your files are more pictures of you. Supreme Leader Zevqir, what a pleasure to meet you. I hope that in spite of your frankly repulsive costume of "sacrificing xenos with hammers" we can maintain a mutually beneficial relationship. Now, for my commentary on your being. So, you began as the son of militiamen and were educated by priests. Military and Priesthood, bastions of orthodoxy irrespectively of the species. It is no wonder you turned up so... Let's go on. So you garnered a good social standing by mere and empty posturing. That is no mean feat, you must be a skilled manipulator. Pity your sense of misguided patriotism steered you from your rightful place on the pulpit and into the warzones.

Your first mission went quite wrong, with a gunshot in the cranium threatening to send you meet your creator prematurely. Yet you survived. What a resilient little octopus you are. And then, instead of angered at your incompetent superiors, or those who threw your kind into a war of conquest, you turned your hate to the alien. For such a natural politician to so easily fall into the scheming of other politicians is disappointing.

Or not, for I read now that after making yourself a war hero you turned against the ineffective political leadership and took the reins. A classic power play, but always very satisfying to watch when it succeeds. I must commend you on your political mastery, indeed.

Unfortunately, paranoia and the gunshot wound sequels eventually caught up with you, my octopus friend. Your current policies are nothing short of self-defeating! Why would a leader massacre those who threaten his grip? If they display cunning enough to become a threat would it not be better to recruit them to your side? After all everyone can be bought, it's a truism but a true one at it. And your reckless warmongering, mark my words, will bring Armageddon upon your people. And with no people to lead, what good is a leader? Why cause so much death and suffering?

I regret that such a promising octopus as yourself, Supreme Leader, has chosen such a route that will lead to massive suffering and death and bring nothing of good nor worthy in the end. If you wanted to go out in a bang, at least make it aesthetically pleasing, like your takeover. Not this.. crude and deranged suicide.

"What is this tentacled monstrosity? If you wish to do business with us, alien fiend, you need to send a proxy who won't draw so much attention, or else find an out of the way meeting spot, so as to not draw unwanted attention.

Okay, I've got the dossier here, compiled in this nice tome. And... it's another case of someone just making up a bunch of nonsensical terms. Some nonsense about 'ships that go in space' and a so called 'Way of Milk', something called 'nanny machines'... this all sounds like a bad case of delirium to me. I don't really care, to be honest. Look, if you want to buy something, just say so. Whatever you might want, either we've got it, or we know someone who can get it."

EDIT:

"Ah, so another alien cultist. Understood. At least this made significantly more sense, except your repeated use of the word 'planet'. What is it with people and making up fake words? Did you misspell 'plane' or was that intentional? I'm further confused by a few passages in your document here - what is this about 'most human collectives' having an 'ambiguous or hostile attitude' towards same-sex pairings? I've certainly never heard of such a thing.

Alas, this read, while certainly refreshing, seems to me to just be more maddened cultist scratchings. Look, I'll be upfront with you - I'm more than happy to do business with you, give you whatever you need to 'achieve your ultimate victory', 'transcend your mortal coil', or 'ready yourselves for the time when the stars are right'. But our relations are just purely business. I don't care about your esoteric teachings, enlightenment, or sacrificial rites. I'm a businessman, Eye. I care about only two things - money and power. So, are we going to do business?"

"There is something about this tube-wearing, kleptocratic delinquent of an anarchist that is... endearing to me. Perhaps he reminds me a bit of the famous 'Robin Hood', though filtered through a rather gritty lens. There's a certain romance to his story. Born into a forgettable and hardy upbringing, he's clearly a profoundly proactive man - few of these criminals nowadays get to say they started with murder before they even grew the first few hairs on their chin. Though the psychopathic torture of animals is... less than poetic, I suppose I should try to see the beauty in a youth's development, especially when it results in such a man.

I love the nickname, 'Five Fingers'. It sounds like a cartoon villain, from a show about the American Mafia, set before the Great Proletarian War. I can already picture Freddy here wearing a tight fedora and a neatly-fitted suit.

And the drama of his life story! Gosh, what a thrilling read. I fell in love when I discovered that this cunning, clever little man managed to rise so quickly through his cartel's ranks, and then - just when you thought you nailed his character - he pulls a coup d'etat against Kaigrazia! Akh, what a twist! Not to even get into what a clearly capable leader he is - if I didn't think he'd stab me in the back, hell, I'd appoint him a Minister here.

But that's not all dear Freddy had to offer us, the audience to this most hair-raising play, no-no. Because, of course, Freddy then goes on a rampage against the very State itself after it tried to pin him down like a toad! And that assassination, during the Lord-Mayor's speech no less!

Statement on Jacob Suchoparski, Premier of the Commonwealth of Sybira

Polish People's Republic
Jeszcze Polska nie zginęła!

While a part of me feels happy to finally see another Pole as a leader, any enjoyment I may have had from investigating such a person has been permanently soured due to the fact that Premier Suchoparski is nothing short of a profoundly bourgeois charlatan. He hides behind socialist slogans and phrasework while in truth being a hypocrite and a liar. The Premier seems to me like as though he is little more than a member of the bourgeois intelligentsia, creating vile works of reactionary romantic art that seeks to disregard and conceal the truth of the class struggle, replacing it with a capitalist's utopianism where the proletarian reality is ignored. Suchoparski's existence has reminded me of the opinions of Andrei Zhdanov on the nature of art, although to quote him in full here would be neither necessary nor appropriate, and I lack the time to state my full views on the backwardness of bourgeois art. Another majorly concerning part of Suchoparski's beliefs includes his general romanticism of bourgeois 'gangster culture', in which he sees the brutal gangsters of the American 1920s as figures to admire. In this he has the support of well known British capitalist warmonger, Winston Churchill, who also believed that the gangsters of America were worth emulating. An utterly pathetic display from a leader of a country that apparently represents the proletarian party.

The disastrous anti-proletarian beliefs of Premier Suchoparski certainly carry forward to his economic policy, as can be proven by the current state of his nation. The country of Sybira - despite being ruled by the 'Proletarian' National Camp - is kept under the capitalist mode of production, where large corporations are not fought against, but indeed encouraged by Suchoparski and his scheme of 'National Champions'. It is clear that neither Suchoparski nor the ONP have the interests of the proletariat of Sybira in mind, and that the ideals the Sybiran People's Republic was founded on have decayed alongside their socialist mode of production. As one would expect from a group of traitors to the proletarian revolution, the ONP also has a wing named after notorious anti-Soviet Polish general Józef Piłsudski, proving that the ONP are nothing but a laughable attempt to utilize the name 'proletarian' to swing the support of the working class masses to their favour. Suchoparski has notably created a clique of technocrats to surround himself with, adding to our already inexhaustible evidence that Suchoparski is no proletarian ruler, but a figure of the bourgeois intellectual elite. I need not provide any more examples of why I do not respect Premier Suchoparski and his policies. Capitalists who show themselves as capitalists are infinitely more tolerable than 'deceptive' buffoons and liars that must hide their capitalism behind red flags and socialist banners to survive.

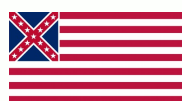

I have no positive words for a degenerate capitalist who lives solely off of the labour of others and who indulges himself in utopian writing and anti-materialist dogma. It is only fitting that before he became the leader of Sybira he was arrested for being a hedonistic fool indulging himself with narcotics and prostitutes. I can only hope that the Sybirak proletariat come to their senses and realize the ONP for the farce it truly is. Only then can the monumental task of bringing about a truly socialist Sybira begin.

'What's wrong with romantic art? Romanticism was very much associated with the revolutions of 1848, so it's not like its inherently reactionary. Really, there is room for both romantic and realist art in the world. Variety is the spice of life after all. And, I assume you're for Socialist Realism, since that was the art that Eastern European communist countries promoted in the 20th and 21st centuries. Realism is about as old as romanticism, so I don't see how you're any more 'progressive' art-wise than he is. I also don't get where the gangster connection comes from, besides Jakub's criminal history. And, how the fuck was Churchill inspired by 1920s gangsters? He smokes cigars? Cigars were smoked by literally everyone back then. It wasn't a gangster thing. Next, you'll be telling me that fedoras are gangster shit.

This guy is blowing hot air out of his ass. Even if I do dislike Jakub myself for pretty similar reasons when it comes to economics.

It seems like Poland in Roman's timeline was part of the Soviet Bloc during an earlier Cold War. Honestly, it seems like only Malenkov being leader of the USSR would've prevented a cold war from emerging in the 50s. And, it seems that an earlier Cold War spelled a certain doom for the USSR, whether a gradual decline or a sudden collapse. Perhaps, it is due to an over-emphasis on military spending over consumer goods.

Honestly, it seems hypocritical that Roman condemns Jackub for hiding capitalist rule under the banner of socialism when he is a butcher who slaughtered members of a dissident trade union. Roman may have been born to workers, but he essentially rose up through the ranks of the party through military service. The Polish 'Workers' Republic is essentially a state ruled by a military junta and a party bureaucracy. Perhaps, it is out of necessity on that matter, though I don't think gunning down dissident trade unions is ever justified, especially when they were your fellow countrymen. If he truly cares about 'proletarian control of the means of production', then he would've done what Yugoslavia did, where there was a single-party authoritarian state that presided over factories managed by the workers.

However, I do admire that he is for Poland's interests and rejects religious dogmas, even if he is indoctrinated into Marxist-Leninist dogma. He managed to have a Poland that isn't a Soviet satellite. And, the funny thing is that the Democratic Party in my timeline was supported by the Soviet bloc, even if we had plenty of ideological differences. I'd rather have him over the capitalist hellhole that America became in the 21st century, partially under the watch of supposed 'socialists' who come from the intelligentsia too.

But hey, I think he'd hate my guts anyways. I mean, yeah, I'm not gay, lesbian, bisexual, or trans. But, I don't think he'd really like crossdressing of any form.

"So, Captain-General Pickett. Certainly quite the character, seemingly a mesh of contradictions between revolution and reaction. Or is he really? In truth, he is purely reactionary, an excellent example of the petty-bourgeoisie and their ideological stances. In this way, he serves to illustrate the reactionary nature of the anarchists and libertarians, and the bourgeois character of their underlying ideals.

To begin with, his obsession with the nonsensical concept of race is classically reactionary, I don't think anyone would deny. Racist viewpoints such as Pickett's are not only scientifically nonsensical, also serve to uphold class society via the establishment of an otherised underclass at the bottom of the socioeconomic totem pole. By defining yourself as a 'white nationalist' seeking to uphold 'white society', you make it supremely clear that you are an agent of class society and have no interest in negating it. It is important to note that throughout history such viewpoints tend to be particularly associated with the petty-bourgeoisie, giving them something to punch down on as they themselves are ground down by the big bourgeoisie.

Understanding the petty-bourgeois perspective is vital to making sense of Pickett's views, and the antagonism between the petty and big bourgeoisie should be kept in mind as we investigate the seemingly progressive elements of his program. Let's take a look at his support for direct democracy and confederalism. I'm placing them together because they are both fundamentally based on the principle of autonomism, the desire for the individual to be free from external forces. This is the same fundamental principle of all anarchists, underlying their calls for decentralisation and 'liberty'. This desire is fundamentally petty-bourgeois. Individualism is itself a product of bourgeois philosophy, and the petty-bourgeois formulation is rendered more acute by the pressure exerted on them by the centralised bourgeois monopolies. Direct democracy brings freedom for the individual, confederalism allows for the independence of the group. Neither have anything to do with socialism.

His economics draw on a similar basis, obsessing over the same principle of autonomism. Pickett's mutualism is a particularly clear indicator of this, with that particular infantile disease being a petty-bourgeois economic theory if ever there was one. It valorises the small owners, and together with syndicalism tries to turn the proletariat into petty-bourgeois themselves. In practice of course, it merely forces them to participate in their own exploitation. While such formulas have long since been discredited, I am not surprised that a reactionary petty-bourgeois individual like the good Captain-General would attempt to revive them to build a localist utopia.

In sum, Pickett isn't a revolutionary figure who just happens to possess reactionary social views. He's reactionary to the core, a pure expression of the counterrevolutionary petty-bourgeois folly that seeks to infect the proletarian movement. He's nothing more than yet another speed bump on the road to world revolution, one that shall be traversed without much incident."

~ Director-General Sophie Hawkins

"President Smith of Nacrad. A good little bourgeois puppet, by all accounts, keeping things running nice and smoothly for the capitalists. Some may protest, pointing out his tax reforms and welfare programs. I'd like to remind such people that Mr. Smith is a self-professed social democrat, and that experience has made it supremely clear that social-democracy is nothing more than capital's last line of defence against revolution. It keeps the proles reasonably happy, and helps cushion the crises that are inevitable within any capitalist system. I'm sure he's been doing a reasonable job of it, and he has the anticommunist credentials to reassure his backers that isn't some secret red. But, if he's reading this, he should know that it won't last. The inherent contradictions will catch up with his little social-democratic experiment, they always do, and when that day come, everything he's built will be swept aside."

Inogo Estima: Good observation with the whole contradiction thing. My question here is why on earth aren't more countries socialist by now and why do a lot of socialist countries collapse to the supposedly more unstable capitalist system. Here's the thing, Marxist theory is a theory, it tries to explain the complexities of the world but in my experience with the social sciences, they usually can't describe things with 100% accuracy or hey, even close to that number. That's why I either don't rely on them or rely on multiple theories, even if they contradict each other to give a bigger picture of the world. But hey, I didn't read Marx's book so you know better.

This brings me to my next point, increasing world tensions and spreading the socialist revolution by force. Socialism must happen naturally, sure we can support the occasional revolution here and there but your zero-tolerance policy will be either make or break socialism. Let's hope it's the former since fun fact I also have a certain disdain towards capitalists, not all of them since I'm not that far left but we can agree that neoliberals and anarcho-capitalists are the worst. The question you must ask before instilling socialism in another country is, do the locals want it? I heard class consciousness is an important thing and without them well... you know what happens next. Also risking a world-ending war to instill socialism, well shit, can't have a communist utopia if there's no one left. Unless you believe in an afterlife, even that doesn't guarantee an entirely happy ending. From what I heard, blowing up the world results in pufferfish reincarnation.

However, I must praise you for being a relatively sane socialist. No seriously, I've met way too many socialists that just collapse into praise eternal supreme leaders [redacted]. I don't see that in you. But I am concerned by how centralized your government is. I trust your goodwill but I can't say the same for your successor. I hope you have some cultural revolution thing if your government turns to shit the people can revolt.

Honestly, I could go on with my thoughts but my timer is running out.

SHK News: General Tansagar flashes in front of World Assembly

Opinion directed towards: The minister of Defense and General of Sherechia: Khameday Tansagar

Regent of the Zora, Avau

"In the wisdom of which I possess, a wisdom that may prove less so should the character of which I am to talk of proves to be as distasteful as certain others I have encountered, such as that oppressive Princess-Sovereign, I shall break the relatively sizable hiatus of which I have taken from the bubble of communication that this place proves to be in order to describe the thoughts I have on a certain person of unknown origin...

To begin with, an exquisite day to yourself, General Khameday Tan... Tansagar. I am sure it will be a pleasure as to get acquainted with yourself, though you may not be able to provide the same act to myself in due course. I wish to be honest and critical of the traits of which you hold and provide as sizable a review of one's history as possible, and as such I shall begin with the aforementioned topic.

With exclusion of words and phrases of which I may have no hope of knowing, or rather would seem specific of one's own place and society for the Zora's Domain has had no pleasure as to encounter, I believe that the description of the Sherechian General begins with birth, forty two years before the current date. The singular paragraph sized description of one's history proves... Unsubstantial, yet I shall comment on the aspects of it nevertheless, including the great pleasure of which his honour must have been given to enter a specific educational institution, a luxury no Zora within the Domain has at their disposal, an unfortunate truth for the small tribe of which we are. I do hope you have come to relish the formative years, sir Tansagar despite one's... Misdemeanors during the time, as loosely stated with comments on alcohol consumption and an overall misbehavior, for though perhaps different for one's own realm it proves a luxury within the one I inhabit. To move on as the description would, I may comment that your achievements throughout the bloody war of which your realm had sustained in defense against an unknown force, named "The Capitalists", though I am unfamiliar with such force, commanding Guardsmen and Women with finesse to secure one's homes and livelihoods successfully, an interesting juxtaposition in comparison to the... Informal way this "Minister of Defense" had begun one's career.

However, it seems time has not been kind to yourself, nor your skills, and for that you have my sympathy though perhaps less so should it prove to be from personal negligence rather than causes outside one's control. I am unsure if the General's copious consumption of alcohol proves to originate from trauma, though the such seems unlikely due to the description I read stating how early the habit had begun. If the prediction that I had made for the origin proves incorrect, I would instead believe the consumption of what is a functionally toxic substance would come from carelessness, a negative trait for one of your position, sir Tansagar. In addition, an obsession with the superior of which you serve under in combination with your careless attitude towards communication, with those whom look towards you or rather mock you and a seemingly deceitful personality as suggested at times through the description of which I have the pleasure of reading, I am not sure if you may prove the greatest hind to effectively dictate the role of protector of your realm

By any means, I find myself in approval of one's attitudes and dedication, when you prove to be focused, on the protection of every element of the realm. It is healthy to be wary of most elements, for without action little can be done as to halt a negative force from dictating great impact on society. In addition, to push for more power as to protect the realm with, in quantity and quality, which seems to be the case in comment on the devices known as "Nukes", what capability the aforementioned may have, will only aid in your mission to protect the realm and the people which live within.

None of this may happen, however, should you prove unable to return to the competence one had mustered during the aforementioned conflict when the time arises...

In conclusion, I must comment the fact of which dictates General Kharmeday Tansagar being a... Mixed individual, one of whom has the positive elements as to create much good for the realm yet with great weaknesses which may prove the aforementioned person unable to act when needed. I much appreciate the opportunity as to read and review the description on someone who proves to have a similar hierarchical position to myself in many a way, as the aspects of which I highlight in review of yourself may prove as reflection and perhaps even critique of the character that I myself possess in addition. Farewell, General. May Din provide yourself with the great strength as to better yourself for the sake of the realm you serve, and I sincerely hope that Hylia grants you favour in the future to come."

Good lord, what a menacing aura. I shall attempt this challenge none the less.

"Avavu, from the realms of Hyrule. Our interactions are scarce for reasons I do not know, maybe fate, maybe something else.

Regardless it seems our paths have crossed on this day and my thoughts towards you will be clear I will make sure of this.

Your people are so strange, lurking in the waters. You are a council of sorts working with your people's prince. I heard that you are the best of the others. At least I hear your voice over the rest.

That is until the prince is right to lead. I hope you do him well in this fact, im sure you will greater your people's future till then.

As for now you exercise caution of those around you which is understandable and admirable in my eyes.

This culture has such an elegance to it, something I doubt Lowblood will ever have.

But regardless of the lighter tones there seems to be some strange anomalies in her lands that im curious of.

Time distortions it seems calamity and twilight, It baffles me. This must be what the abyss sounds like to outsiders.

With that being said I hold no envy towards you. Though respect is something I can say I have for you personally, the way you speak is like a force that will surround you, not a deadly force but one that isn't afraid to put you in your place.

Its a force to behold I guess im saying.

Well I think I've covered all that I truly wanted to, when I do these people seem to get things twisted so im sure I've done my own twisting this time, I hope it means no harm though.

And I do hope we interact in the future as her realm seems interesting I wonder how they fair in combat, im always curious.

And on the last note, I hold them fairly positive in my eyes, just from seeing them around." -Luden

Ok, which ugly lifeform am I now forced to look at... Luden? According to your bio, you are actually a human, but are highly deformed because of experimentation. In my opinion humans already look deformed. All aliens look deformed because they destroyed our glorious Ultra-Galactica. So long ago you helped a demon king, which is something I expect from an especially ugly alien like you. Then you were declared dead after you were shot, then you rose up again and were shot dead again. Wait... you are immortal?! How in the name of the Gods can I sacrifice your soul to them if you keep reviving everytime I smash your head with the sacrificial hammer. Maybe I can find a way to do that further in the bio. So then you got imprisoned by researchers who committed horrific experiments on you. Hopefully I can get ahold of it one day to find out how I can break your immortality.

So now on to your goals. A better connection to some operations in Lowblood. I have to admit that it is a good idea. Its good to know what kind of stuff happens in your nation. Its more intelligence then I expected from alien scum like you. Next is national expansion. I'm not familiar with planet stuff, but I'm still going to call it bad because I don't like you. Next thing you want to do is improve your military. Not that I expect much for an alien like you who are cowardly enough to kill our great gods and great Ultra-Galactica with it. Next thing is lore overhaul? Ok I guess, don't know how I should answer to that.

You were labeled the end and many saw you as a bad orren. Any alien is a bad orren in my book. You have a large variety of cursed weapon, which is unsurprising because any alien weapon is cursed in my book. You are also cybernetic? How did you get ahold of it? You stole that technology from the gods didn't you! That's the only way you get ahold of holy technology. Your mask is also cursed, which doesn't surprise me in the slightest.

"This is a xeno dude, who wants to sacrifice everyone non-Squalmar to some gods of some crazy mythology. He ain't gonna last long, and he is hostile as hell, which is why we are better off contactin' some other aliens. With our spaceship, we can offer them some help againts this loco-seafood or ask them for transport for our warriors, so they could move to other planets and help to repel his followers' invasions. This might be a nice overture for xeno-diplomacy. Doesn't take a xeno-scientist to find out, that Zevqir pissed off more than half of the galaxy and his regime gonna end for good soon, since it's on decline. Plot twist: His gods actually exist, and they come and kick his ass because they are pissed off by his behaviour. But... what's gonna be after his end? His empire gonna collapse for sure. The question is when? And what will happen to his people?" -Overboss Shawn Bjornson

The most admirable thing to observe in history is the situation of those subject to war from a young age. Caballero is thus undeniably a man worthy of at least a degree of respect, even before all else is accounted for -- I watched my university disappear beneath bombs myself, and thus his situation occupies a special place in my heart. Practically a child-soldier when he was plucked from his childhood - which was hardly peaceful, innocent, or idyllic to start with - to fight in Britain, I am overwhelmed by the tales of his bravery and sheer honour; anyone to emerge from the horrors I hear to occur at Llanfa- uh, Llanfairpw- Llanfarpug- uh, Llanfair, without a broken mind is someone with a steel resolve and admirable dedication to his own fortitude.

Nevertheless, Caballero and his state in Vigo deeply unsettle me with regards to their political situation. Not only has he stepped away from the spirituality which once graced his Fatherland, but he openly embraces incredibly revisionist lines of thought which spit upon the legacy of Communism with their frankly appalling attitudes towards the global revolution at large, and the construction of socialism at home. Look at what you have been endowed with, Caballero! You have been granted the great gifts which you possess within your own two hands and within your mind itself; why are you not using that providential authority to carve out that which righteously exists within your image? Eternity and destiny have placed in your way a great path, one by which you might surmount all that you survey.

Before it is too late, Caballero-- before you succumb to the circling vultures of Counter-Revolution, and before Vigo itself descends beneath reaction's blackening tide, I urge that you accept thy spiritual endowments, and move on the path towards a glorious total revolution, free from the liberal trappings which now infect your party.

Please, Comrade.

South Reinkalistan is a massive, ecologically-diverse nation notable for its roving student militias and widespread hatred for the elderly. In the midst of a room-temperature cultural revolution that's lost its momentum, the Party carefully plans its next move. As the brittle bones of fragile empires begin to crack beneath their own weight, history's symphony reaches crescendo pitch. The future is all but certain.

High Princess Reissechi Yuri on the People's Federation of Reinkalistan and Comrade Turaniski:

"Comrades, catgirl comrades! Nyan!~ I have encountered this comrade fraternal nation from across the sea or somewhere far away - The People's Federation of Reinkalistan which is according to some, a socialist dictatorship of the proletariat! If it be true, then the people of Reinkalistan and Comrade Turaniski be an ally in the United Front and struggle against imperialism! But when I looked in and met their delegates and cadres and into the eyes of that dude named "Turaniski", I had my doubts! They give me really really bad vibes!

The whole rubric and decorum and the framework of all the place seemed besmirched in Red aesthetic too much that it left me a taste of a stagnant Marxist development equivalent to Enver Hoxha of Albania, that the whole place reeks of... Hoxhism... There are a lot of Soviet and Chinese revisionists in there that I can't put in exactly what is wrong, but gives me very bad vibes...

And when the cadres from the Council of Catgirl Yurika Aenschein-chan came in and saw with.. who was... Lavask... an ugly man and really really boring, I had my doubts and can finally pin what's exactly wrong! Lavask... Lavatsk... he is an ugly man and really boring, no not in Molotov boring.. or Feyris Cherise boring (whole crowd laughs)... but like... just something wrong... And Veros who they met, Yurika's catgirls was also not agreeable... I couldn't find a cute girl to talk with in that nation!

And when they came with the religious dialectics, not as in the allegorical dialectics spewn by the chauvinist Kyrieist camp... but idealism and metaphysics of a different kind, this is an idealistic deviation! Liberalism! They enforce idealism coupled with Marxism and make it incoherent in a way that would make Trotsky blush! And the whole penchant on nuclear war and adventure without regards to pragmatics and practical matters, it reeks of J. Posadas thought! An ultra-left adventurism!

But what's worse with Comrade Turaniski is this!"

**High Princess Reissechi Yuri grabs a portrait and the whole crowd of girls gasps in shock and disgust!**

"What is this shameless disgrace! What a travesty! Bad taste! Comrade Turaniski is here, shown in a fenyboy bishie pose and looking like a bad... shameless.... *sigh*. And his boyfriend is Konrad, the fascist roader Le Patron from Surrealist Patagonia who is not only his lover but his husband! And look at the face and the total appearance that Comrade Turaniski makes with his loving Konrad Le Patron! Why is Le Patron, a macho-fascist who hates all byishi (girls) and a reactionary his boyfriend and his lover!

Comrades, I am totally right when I told you that this person is a revisionist, as you can see from this disgusting photo which smacks of gay fenyboy man-revisionism and macho-fascism! I can totally tell you that that I am correct when I see this gives me bad vibes! They will desecrate the immortal science of Marxism-Leninism with this revisionist gay fenyboy.... fenyboy bishie... What is this "submissive and breedable"!

San Hbro: You are an admirable man that rules their country with finesse. There are many good things I can say about you, comrade Kor. For starters, you are trying to turn Poland into a strong independent nation that can aid the USSR in spreading socialism. In Sherechia, our leader is too much of a coward to spread socialism. You are a strong leader and a strong general who is loyal to the party and ideology, even if that loyalty comes at a social cost. Keep strong comrade, being loyal to the socialist cause is more important than being popular among dissenters. Your stance on religion is admirable and I feel your hardships in trying to impose materialistic atheism in a majority catholic country. Just like how that religion threatens hell and promises heaven, Tsaotak is a plague to Sherechia, a remnant of its backward past that promises pufferfish reincarnation and eternal life. Even so, you know when to be a bit revisionist in a way. I know that's a dirty word but you did some shady business deals with the west. At least the intent is admirable though. Being able to strengthen the technological might of your country so that later you can export the socialist revolution to the west.

A great leader must also be a great father and you fit into that role perfectly. You are a father that your sons will be proud off. You try to give your sons the opportunity to fight for the socialist cause, too bad one of them decided on a different path. It's alright, I also had the same experience. Sherechia needs a leader that knows how to run a family because to know how to run a country, you must know how to run a family. Looking at you Inogo.

Overall, you should help me get into power. You will have an ally at your disposal and someone relatable that you can talk with.

Inogo Estima: You look like white Chairman Mao. Admittedly you're charming in a way but you also look like you're going to shoot dissenters and give undisciplined soldiers a good beating. Also holy baotai but that's a lot of medals. Id be funny if you walked next to an MRI scanner wearing all of that. Also, fuck of San, I can rule better because I have no screaming kids to deal with.

"Is that all, Inogo? Is that the best you can do to turn a society upside down and tear the bourgeoisie from its roots? For a revolutionary in your position, I expected something more radical. You clearly didn't go far enough, a simple massacre and lynching of the old bourgeois and collectivization of the economy is something that anybody can do. Market socialism? Egalitarianism? Protectionism? I scoff at such notions. However, I do commend your will and aims which have been set in motion since day one. Then your nuclear stockpile would prove useful in the hands of someone like me."
