Still not sure what to classify this artist as. Probably call this electronic and ambient mix, with maybe some post-rock but I'm having a hard time deciding if that really fits.

Then next album has a ton of really long songs so I think I'll pass on it for now because I feel like going through shorter songs.

To whoever had a problem with me liking Green Day, Billy Talent is the other punk band I like. But I vastly prefer Billy Talent.

I would be listening to Blind Guardian if I weren't in the mood for Billy Talent.

Okay, now I'm just going through whatever the hell I want instead of going "Oh, this band has between 20 to 30 songs on Spotify, I'll go through those".

I'll probably avoid going through ones with like 40 and above right now, though, so I can finish the lower ones first.

Set Fire to Flames-Deja, Comme Des Trous De Vent, Comme Reproduit

This band has 2 15-song albums, and there's an interesting story about them:

"Both albums were recorded "in states of little or no sleep, in varying levels of intoxication, and in physical confinement", with the result being brooding, eerie music. Their second album was recorded in a barn in rural Ontario; the sounds of the creaking doors and other background noise are heard in the songs"~Wikipedia

To my surprise, it's basically a pop remix of a Buju Banton song. Needless to say, I'm ecstatic to see this.

Just as surprising as that, I'm actually enjoying her new album. Even "Come & Get it", which I hated the first few times I heard it.
