Guilty as charged. The vast majority of national leaders I've ever had that were noteworthy in any way were either insane, or inhuman enough to justify a completely alien mindset being the norm. As such, I tend to be very bad at having sane characters. Part of it because having such extreme personalities makes it a lot easy for characters to stand out, I suppose. And part of me, for me at least, is that I'm not the best at dealing with normality. I like thinking up abnormal mindsets and perspectives on the world, which means characters of mine tend to reflect really strange (and often abhorrent) ways of seeing things. Whereas with more grounded ideas, I don't have much to make them really interesting or worth pursuing, so it's the most crazy ideas that tend to stick around the most for me.

Aozora Chiyumi, the self-declared Supreme Overlady of All Reality, has fallen. These are the irreconcilable visions of her legacy.
Do you support STABILITY, SUBJUGATION, EUPHORIA, PURITY, or ORDER?

(This is alternate universe, not a direct continuation of Kyoki Chudoku. I'm not ready for that yet.)

No. The "point" to this game, if there was one, is to work on your worldbuilding. "Create a nation based on whatever ideology you love" is only your way of doing it, and in my opinion that way is just. Boring.

Don't worry, humanity is well on its way to sterilizing the entire world through pollution without the need for any force. Just let the corporations do their thing and see the almost magical results!

Don't you love it when you just twist and turn your ideals inside your characters to the point where you don't know if they're admirable, foolish, or downright horrific?

no it isn't

it's to create something interesting.

most of the time this doesn't involve creating your perfect ideal nation.

Making nations based off of your ideology is fine, but it's more fun to insert certain changes or challenges.

I mean, tbh, most of NS' demographics come from America, Europe, or the Philippines from what I've observed, so it's rather natural that there's more Western and SEA nations here, as people tend to have more knowledge of the regions they live in
