Arms and weapons trades are so common they have become socially normalised and treated no different than any other sales industry, seen as just another sector of the retail market. Synne Industries itself is responsible for around 40% of the global arms trade; however, domestically, the industry is highly competitive, with 'big businesses' only holding a collective 20% of market shares, with the remaining 80% being occupied by small, family-owned, and local stores. This is primarily due to a gentleman's agreement between Small and Big Business, stating that neither will interfere in the other's domestic market, thus granting a safe corner to the big corporations while maintaining a competitive market for the small guys.

Quite interested in hearing how that agreement is enforced, actually.

OOC: It is indeed the case that "You are not real" is the opening line of the RSI Hub factbook—but that's just it: it's the very first words. Many consider it bad form to answer "what have you learnt" by repeating the first one or two lines of the first factbook nearly verbatim. It suggests a cursory read and little effort expended. Furthermore, I don't think the RSI Factbook is really about solipsism; the first line is superficially solipsistic, but the content gets more into parallel dimensions and Extraspace.

"Regretfully, I usually go straight to Politics when I login to the Leskya Portal. Ahh, how could I let my political appointment override my yearnings as a scholar of the humanities? So today, I decided to instead open the Culture page, and I read about Leskyan conflict resolution. Interestingly, Leskya claims that all conflict stems from personal schisms or emotional clashes, with none being about resource management or powergrabs. This is impressive—political theorists everywhere would give an arm and a leg to know how you erased greed for power from your society. I had previously been concerned that statelessness would allow demagogues to use physical power to try and wield a commune as a weapon for themselves, but I am impressed to learn that Leskyans are beyond that type of behavior.

"Nevertheless, the Leskyan war game is a very curious tradition. Perhaps it is a consequence of growing up in Baizou, which has culturally eschewed martial culture and aesthetics ever since the Pacific War, but I could never imagine actually trying to draw blood as a sport. It just seems—for lack of a better word, bloodthirsty. And as a practical matter, think of the concussive or internal injuries that could happen before blood is drawn!"

contradictory naming (Lotus "Conservatives" supporting some Labour policies, "Marxists" advocating for reform and not revolution, and "Libertarians" actually arguing against deregulation in some cases, "Power Party" advocating for disabled persons) to their number and rather diverse policies. Their governing "Grand Coalition", although grand in number of parties, is not so grand when considering they govern as a minority coalition holding 47% of seats in parliament (though they do have majority of seats in Council). Labour, despite being the largest party in above coalition, is actually not head of coalition, which belongs to the Marxist Party.

Damn, a couple of things: The fact that they have characters and leaders that look a little... Uncanny and terrifying. I also love the fact that they use NS Stats, you don't see a lot of it these days, with nations outright dismissing them instead of trying to fit them in.

And this, probably my favorite as a geography nut: Climate ranges from sub-arctic (in Newero), mountainous regions with 7000m high peaks (in Mirjynistan), desert, savanna and jungle (in Praseodymia). Temperature ranging from -40°C to 45°C. Those are the temperatures to chill out in, and I approve.

Clarissa, alas, cannot automatically speak and write Polish by being in Adriana's form, with her Polish capacity being limited to a level of Google Translate. Furthermore, Adriana's larger size is a result of Polish technological limitations. In order to fit all of the necessary data into her system, she needed to be built physically larger.

While originally colonised by Germans, Fardelshuffelestein was in essence isolated from the motherland -as well as nearly everyone else- for much of its history, allowing for a new language to be formed by its people that is not really just a variant of its mother language (think Afrikans and Dutch, or many Creole languages) but a separate language of its own, with different alphabet and -presumably- grammar.

They have many levels of political parties, which based on what I have read, the levels seem to be based on the area covered by the political party.

I am not new to NS. My former main CTE'd about two months ago, because of RL stuff, and I forgot the password. Don't judge a book by it's cover, and don't judge a nation by it's population.

@Gemeanwealth of Man:

So this is one of the things I have learned:

Founded: Nov 08, 2015
Scandinavian Liberal
Paradise

The Commonwealth spent much of the next three decades in relative peace, only fighting a series of pirate fleets in its routes until 2250 when it went to war with the Third Kingdom again over a series of systems, Gonthra included.

I can only think that they have been in constant state of war for a better part of their history that such a thing is called "relative peace". Nope, not total peace. Just relatively better. It sets up on how messed up they can be with their constant warfare.

The fighting the pirates also sets my curiosity up high because if they are dealing with space pirates and they get their booty and loot... What would the Commonwealth do with them? Dispose of them systematically, or just sell it back as war bounty? Or use it for charity runs and stuff in a wholesome way?

@ AN:

So they had a coup in 2034, on top of the fact that they have perhaps two radio stations... At least the ones we know of.
