Sorry to burst your bubble but Alvin is very flawed.

He lacks empathy to a very large degree or outright is a sociopath, having children trained from birth to be expendable soldiers and "special forces" that get killed only to be used as political ammunition against its foes.

He's also someone who has done absolutely nothing to earn his station as a speaker for the idea of "northumbria", he was in the Army for a few years and if I remember right has slightly more education than Saddam Hussein who only really got in because everyone else ahead of him died.

For some reason people absolutely adore him despite never having earned it either in a given thread or in a backstory and everyone listens to him no matter what, which is a classic Gary Stu archetype

He receives barely any dialogue, does barely anything outside of one-line posts where he somehow turns things around on his verbal sparring partners and they get epically owned tm, without any real rhyme or reason other than "they went against Alvin Ashleigh", so he never really gets any kind of actual fleshing out. No inner thoughts, no things from his POV, no hobbies, no side interests. Nothing.

And it might be down to the specific medium you seem to be stuck in of doing one line posts but it drags this idea down, but someone who doesn't have flaws isn't really compelling.

The best characters are flawed either in many minor ways or usually in a few big ways, and it results in the story being them overcoming their flaws and growing into being a better person in spite of said flaws. Which... Alvin kinda isn't. He's just the entirety of Northumbria with a whole bunch of nameless drones that follow him because they adore him for no other reason than he's Alvin Ashleigh why do people even give nationalist northumbria attention anymore, it's clear he's not here to do anything productive.

THE PEOPLE * ETERNAL

" We will not bow to your dictation. We are free. We bled to be free.
Who are you to tell us what we may and may not do? We stopped being your slaves an era ago. "

South Reinkalistan is a massive, ecologically-diverse nation notable for its roving student militias and widespread hatred for the elderly. In the midst of a room-temperature cultural revolution that's lost its momentum, the Party carefully plans its next move. As the brittle bones of fragile empires begin to crack beneath their own weight, history's symphony reaches crescendo pitch. The future is all but certain.

I suppose NS' leaders just have less cigars on their minds, and more of smoking towns and cities that have wronged them!

Or scars, gotta have them nasty scars across their face to exude villainy.

The children thing is completely incorrect, as Alvin Ashleigh has never had anything to do with "having children trained from birth to be expendable soldiers and "special forces" that get killed only to be used as political ammunition against its foes". His backstory isn't really elaborated on because it's not directly relevant to the thread but there is a time gap between education/the army (which is only mentioned because Ideal Britain asks me every ten minutes) and him becoming leader of the Northumbrian Nationalist Party, with him in 2021 being in his very late thirties.

'Adore' isn't accurate. I mean there are the rallies but the people chanting his name and protesting outside police stations for him are his supporters, and as we've seen in recent years in plenty of different countries the dedication of a movement's supporters to that movement's leader is something that exists. Otherwise people listen to him and "nameless drones" follow his commands because they are loyal to Northumbria and he is the president of Northumbria, just as how civil servants carry out the orders of politicians and generals and the troops under them the orders of presidents.

Your other points are mostly absolutely correct.

Threadjacking like, uh, mentioning cliches about NS leaders on the NS cliche thread. Maybe that's threadjacking because of its unofficial repurposing as a Forum 7 chatroom? I don't know. This is a very good example of why people should at least use the 'show post' feature before they start criticising people on their ignore list for perceived (despite, you know, having them on ignore) misdeeds.

When describing sexual life of the characters one of the three cliches are used: either a character is as celibate as Holy Mary, the characters is happily married with children and finally the character is a Casanova.

I think it's because people on NS are a binary

They're either prudes who feel awkward writing about how their character kissed another person (:wave:) or they're homi people who would happily describe every time their NS leader pounded/got pounded if they wouldn't get nuked by mods.

There is no in-between.

I tried to find an in-between with my WA ambassador (too bad I was never able to finish her factbook muh meh she's gonna die soon so who cares). She is essentially a polyamory lesbian who willingly forces herself to abide by the prudish culture. While she is a virgin she neither the less has an urge to "let go of it", controlling this urge with torture-esque techniques. Essentially she is a parody of such prudish characters...

Tbh I'd only include sexual actions to advance the plot in a meaningful way, random homyposting is just... weird

I only read "X seeking Y" RPs for the plot.

I was thinking about introducing some of my characters there only for them to wreak havoc the moment someone tries to get intimate with them...

Take a look at our Empire, one on which the Moon never sets!

I am not a Russian but a Cameroonian. Overlook this POS.

forced the life on me. I do not want to live. My life brings happiness to no one Pronouns up to your choice but I'd prefer to be referred to as she/her.

I reserve the right to /stillme any one-liners if my post is at least two lines long

When describing sexual life of the characters one of the three cliches are used: either a character is as celibate as Holy Mary, the characters is happily married with children and finally the character is a Casanova.

I think it's because people on NS are a binary

They're either prudes who feel awkward writing about how their character kissed another person (:wave:) or they're homi people who would happily describe every time their NS leader pounded/got pounded if they wouldn't get nuked by mods.

There is no in-between.

I don't, um, want to write about [REDACTED], and Marielastair is a loving albeit unstable/rocky marriage because of Alastair's addiction and terrible health. Wilhelm is a former Casanova because, uh, well. He has a daughter.

I tried to find an in-between with my WA ambassador (too bad I was never able to finish her factbook muh meh she's gonna die soon so who cares). She is essentially a polyamory lesbian who willingly forces herself to abide by the prudish culture. While she is a virgin she neither the less has an urge to "let go of it", controlling this urge with torture-esque techniques. Essentially she is a parody of such prudish characters...

Well, I meant OOCly. I too have written "hypersexual" characters - though almost always it is portrayed as a bad thing.

cool idea though.

Wil is hypersexual by definition, though he allegedly has more control of it. I...uh...secks....weird. Meh.

Oh no, not this discussion.

I'm gonna distract everyone with this: when I read military factbooks, most of the time those images don't show up, like, the links are broken or something.
