Indeed. Although I don't really listen to Foetus and Mr Bungle. I have yet to explore their music.

Boy you are missing out. Bungle's entire discog. is a rollercoaster of genre-bending insanity, Foetus is hit and miss but his hit albums are 10/10s. Nail and Hole are 2 of the best experimental - industrial albums to ever grace the universe.

Tbh, as far as I've listened so far, I prefer their earlier stuff instead of their newer stuff. I love a lot of the songs I've heard from The Bends (1995) so far and I love Creep. OK Computer (1997) is also great. I've only heard Idioteque from Kid A, which was ok, but I could do without it. I'm also pissed off how it's considered "intelligent dance music". I've listened to some songs from In Rainbows (2007) and I didn't like it. Their song Lotus Flower from The King Of Limbs (2011) is also crappy. :/

Seems like with most of these classic artists/bands, their earlier stuff is the best.

I agree with you on IDM; it's an extremely pretentious name.

I'm not familiar with Radiohead beyond Kid A, which I thought was excellent. My favorite track on there is New National Anthem (mostly for nostalgic reasons; without knowing it for years, I heard that song a lot when I was younger ☐).

I can see why it may not be for everybody though.

Public Enemy – Fight the Power

The only band I can think of where their later stuff is better is The Beatles. I mean they were awesome start to finish, but they were special 1965 and on.

Radiohead - Everything In Its Right Place

Genre: Electronic, experimental

Alright. I'll give Mr. Bungle the try since I have listened to some Faith No More. ☐

Don't expect anything FNM-like out of Bungle. They are totally unique.

Yeah, so far, it's alright.

Mr. Bungle - None Of Them Knew They Were Robots.

Now this song's a bit more catchy. ☐

Haven't listened to either yet, but I have a feeling I'll like The Bends more.

I love this song.

The Bends is CRIMINALLY underrated. I much prefer it to OK Computer which is widely considered their best.

Now that's a catchy song by those guys. I think they're one of the only pop rap groups I like.

I talked with Ancient Magnia about these guys once and he gave me shit for liking them. ☐

Message To Harry Manback - Tool

Genre: Progressive Metal
Album: Ænima

This whole song is just great. ☐ The title's pure genius, and the song itself is awesome. It's a recorded phone message from an angry Italian making death threats against the band. And they even put a nice little piano part behind it.
