[background=][[/background]]AAN: We don't have vice presidents, or presidents at all for that member, as we are led by a council.

Throwing a shoe at a council member is assault, which is punishable by 1 year in jail, followed by 1.5 years in rehab.

Edit: Ninja'd.

AN: Property damage is not a crime, but arson and attempted murder are. Arson is punishable by up to 6 months in prison and 3 months in rehab, while attempted murder is punishable by 15 years in prison and 5 years of rehab, leading to a sentence of 6 months in prison and 3 months in rehab if people are not in it, and 15.5 years in prison and 5.25 years in rehab if people are in it.

Assault?

You'll be at by local police officers to "get the fuck down." Once you "get the fuck down," you will then be arrested and then you will receive a fine or you'll end up spending a few days in the local jail.

In all provinces it would fall under Public Indecency of some grade, 4 months to 8 months in jail according to the Penal Code.

Threat someone of violence or death due to reasons of race, social group, sexuality, etc.

hmmmm, depends

if its a minor group then they'll be forced to go on house arrest and their place monitored at all times

if its a major group like the Noburo-kai Yakuza group, then 3 months in prison, and made to give up any information on that group part of a terrorist organization?

Life in prison or execution. It depends on how bad the organisation is but the minimum is life in prison, after of course they are tortured and questioned. (Unless you are a terrorist organisation supported by Rostoria, then you will probably be sent to go cause chaos somewhere)

Not illegal, or more accurately, illegal but hardly enforced. Technically you are supposed to get fined and maybe given community service at worst. But in reality nobody really drives drunk since they just hop on the always late public transport or just take a walk.

Not a crime by itself, at least in most cities. Some cities had put fines in place for this practice tho.
