That their revolution was somewhat irredentist insofar as independence movements were, well, independent at the beginning of it all.

There are 6 nations on their earth and they are the largest
(I thought they just controlled the whole world)

We do! Well, minus Australia, and the rest are just autonomous regions.

EDIT: For PAN, I really love the logos and emblems you made for your armed forces, and I admit, usually my idea of a seal would be to just have a slightly modified flag with some bits added inside, but yours look different and are pretty cool.

Also the use of a monospace font, I suppose.

One thing for certain is that their version of the English is vastly different from what we know of. They sound more Germanic and quite authentic.

Their government policies tend to be ideologically vague but consistent. Along with this, they are officially a "Federal Republic" but act more in line as a "highly centralized authoritarian regime" led by Pierre-Édouard M'bassou, who is recognized as the "Father of Africa" and looks pretty well for someone who is 107 years old.

They aren't particularly good at English. In some respects, surprising, and in others very, very much not so.
