Most NS Stats and Policies are somewhat accurate to how I envision this nation, but please try to judge this nation primarily based on its factbooks.

This is my attempt to write a nation that embodies my political views, but is also played realistically, showcasing both the upsides and downsides of my ideal system. Most factbooks are still an active WIP, so let me know if there's anything you think can be improved upon

This Martian state defined by its predominant ethnicity wound up embroiled in a civil war in which subgroups of the population decided they wanted to do that ethnostate thing for themselves.

They've got their own SCP Foundation, but it's more like a glorified CIA here. Not as secretive either, since they put their address right bloody there.

Also, I don't know if it's just my devices, but the pictures in your misc factbooks haven't been loading for me for the past few days. Just thought I'd point it out in case something happened to the images themselves.

if a politician turns out to be a horrible choice, you don't have to wait until the next election, you can boot them out fairly simply. now while an american might conceive this principle of deposing those who stand against the people they were elected to represent as being at the point of an armed patriot's gun, in this case it's through the ballot box.

Apparently @Kotera associates society and its pressures with an Other. Huh. He also seems to be really bloody obsessed with consumerism at the moment, and its pitfalls. He also views the most common ideas of the great big Proletariat REVOLUTION as associated with more capitalistic concepts, given how such terms as "Revolution" and "Progress" are included in the category of "ideas under Capital's thumb".

Oh, and this line: "We are reluctant to give in to the idea of something greater than us, precisely because it is greater, and thus proves our notion of individuality is rather superfluous and is something we're not as in control of as we'd like to think," is rather interesting as an insight into his character. It indicates to me his perspective on the notion of a higher power is largely an outside one; he observes it as just another aspect of human psychology. Honestly, I've just concluded his life is lived around the notion of trying his damn best to be an outside observer at this point, given his perspective on life.

Also, I did what he suggested. I concluded that I'm very good at buying nothing new except food for the past several months.

I'm boring, I tell you.

Note the hyphen, good pally-o-buddy-pal. I just meant "the time at which the IRV civilization was defined by the influx of Aryan nomads", not that there was an Aryan Age. That would be an... unfortunate... name, yeah?

Nah, the Nazis appropriated Aryan to mean Germanic (or more specifically Germans made to look like Nords) because the prevailing theory at the time was that the presence of symbols like the swastika (as a symbol of peace) in archeological sites across Eurasia meant that there had been an "Aryan" empire across the continent at some point in the ancient past, which they used to justify their war and to do their whole ethnonationalism thing. The actual Aryans were more likely Turkic nomads, and their roaming spread the symbol. If you're interested, the Vedas and other Hindu texts had their predecessors written during this time, when the Aryan people yeeted their way into Indus society and found their way into the priestly and upper-classes over a period of hundreds of years of integration, according to my understanding. I'm sure LP or someone more versed on history could correct me if I'm wrong.

Wojakiewism is basically fascism with extra steps. State-planned economy that maintains some aspects of private property? A focus on using the stick and carrot to emphasize production? Emphasis on nationalism and particularly ethnicity-based nationalism? Yup, smells like fascism.
