Technically it's still arson and it's still a homicide...
But, if he was a criminal already tried and wanted, the court will probably give you a discount on your sentence.
You should probably get a 5 years sentence.

But be careful, if the criminal has not been tried or arrested in the act, he is still a suspect, which completely changes the situation! In this case you could face life in prison or even suffer the death penalty.

What is your nation's penalty for the crime of embezzlement?

Considering that we are run by corporations/crime syndicates, you are likely getting fired from job and either heavy fined, jailed for fraud and/or flogged.

Kidnapping is a crime of seizing, confining, abducting, or carrying away a person by force or fraud with the intent to hold the person for ransom, use the person as a shield or hostage, commit another felony, inflict injury or abuse, or export the person out of legal jurisdiction of the Commonwealth of Narland or a jurisdiction of a member State of the Commonwealth. Concealing the kidnapping or victim compounds the crime. It does not include proper authority (even if wrongly supposed) taking custody, arresting, or transporting someone in custody nor the absconce of a familial guardian (parent, or grandparent) with their child. These are different charges in and of themselves.

5-10 years hard labor, added to whatever extra crimes (e.g, grand larceny extortion 5 years hard labor and full restitution with interest) were committed as part of the kidnapping, If the child is lost/disappeared, harmed or killed, death by hanging. Using a child as a shield or selling the child overseas will receive public caning then hanging.

Nationwide manhunt, most likely capital punishment, however if you do so at a silly way you just get a lifetime in jail.

Not a crime as most people in Tangatarehua wouldn't know what a Christmas tree was. If you deliberately assaulted someone with a tree, you could be charged with aggravated assault or use of a weapon, which carries between 5 and 20 years in prison.

I mean if it caused enough bodily harm to the person, like maiming or severely injuring a person - which, let's be honest, stepping on a Lego hurts, but not that much - it could theoretically count as battery. But it doesn't under the current definition within the Civil Criminal Code, so it's basically legal.
