Huh, the constitution mentions Jews without being anti-Semitic (the opposite, in fact). Quite interesting.

Ngotintu is a nation in the African Great Lakes region sandwiched between Malawi, Mozambique, Zambia, and Tanzania. It suffered extensively from British colonialization and exploitation, and is now ruled by a dictatorship with an iron clench on the entire nation.

After years of gruelling war, two powerful empires were formed over the Sandrau Empire's former territory: the Westmarch Empire and Eostre Commonwealth, marking the beginning of the First Empire Era. These two empires were led by brother and sister Asger Gomyrth and Gunhild Gernaynth, respectively.

The IDF's initial conscription period was a whopping 30 years (45 for the officers, because why not?). No mention is made of its reduction, which makes me question the organizational setup of their military as a whole.

Despite it's looks of being a despotic theocracy, the Israeli Totalitariat reports that it has one of the standards of living in the world.

Yegla: The rise of the Patchwork People, the authors of the Yeglan Revolution, starts with Dmitri Rasputin, where the rage of his family getting killed by some enemy that is hinted to be the police force of an authoritarian state that preceded the modern Yeglan nation. He started out humbly, at first, making newspapers and distributing them to his neighbors. His movement started to expand, though, and he raised an army, eventually executing "El Presidente" and showing his lifeless body on a flagpole in the Palace.

Typo. The conscription period has been reduced to ten years (still the largest in the world, because why not?). I initially meant to say that 15 through 60 was the viable recruiting age before forced retirement from the IDF. Thanks for bringing that to my attention.

Although taking place in the 1700s, the Inkling revolution used names and abbreviations such as "Liberation Front for the Peoples of Inkopolitia (LFPI)" when most organizations at the time were called stuff like "Green Mountain Boys" or "The Continental Army". Not that I am complaining, just thought it was interesting. Likewise, their revolution was connected directly to the American one, meaning that the Inkling and American revolutions could be theoretically combined into one anti-British war.

Also, bit off-topic, but their massive ink-oct population makes them the last majority Native-American country (not counting the Mestizo)

A notable difference between the largely-similar English Socialism and Neo-Bolshevik thought is that while adherents of Insoc prefer to simply change the definition of words like freedom or liberation, Neo-Bolsheviks prefer to just pretend they are, in fact, free.

The story of Mbelemilele starts with the Bantu-speaking people, who were the first to inhabit the territory. Their colonial history starts with Portugal annexing the region, and after that, the British annexed the region. The country got its independence in 1958, after a 4-year-long war against the British.

I said it was a shithole because 1. It has a LOT of corruption and 2. A LOT of poverty. Trust me, I am a South American, I would know. Essentially, i'm making a version of Inkopolitia that's more on par with (sadly) South America today. Because my main Inkopolitia and the nation that started it all has one of the highest standards of living in the world

Edit: I will edit my sig since I think calling it a "Shithole" while comparing it to a big part of modern day South America is not good
