"Crepuscle Hivernal Sans Fin sur les Terres de la Guerre" by Neige et Noircœur

26 minutes, very repetitive. Still one of the best black metal songs out there.

I'm really diggin' some of this stuff by the Tool singer's new band (that's pretty much his solo project). It's strangely got some music that's more on the comedy level, too.

"Yhtä Yön Kanssa" by Azaghal

"Yhtä Yön Kanssa" means "One With the Night". From their first full-length called "Mustamaa". It translates to "Black Earth" literally, but here they mean Mordor.

Response to the video: Wut?

I've never really been a fan of the band though. When I first heard them, I felt like they were a boring version of MGMT.

Yes- the video did have me saying the same, first time, but I think MGMT are generally better.

Sainkho Namtchylak-Who Stole The Sky?.

Apparently she has a 7-octave singing range, or something. Pretty sweet.

Agreed. There are some pretty bad ass Tuvan singers. Huun Huur Tu, and Sainkho Namtchylak, to name a few (Not sure I know any others, at least on the top of my head). But for some reason the fact Sainkho is like, an old lady or something, makes it even more awesome.

Sainkho Namtchylak-Temple of Majtreja

My favorite part is from 15:44 to the end.

Kongar-ol Ondar is probably the most well-known.

Strange. And I don't think I've even ever heard of the most well-known one.

Sainkho Namtchylak-Kaar Deerge.

Here's a good example of her range. This is completely different from her Runnin' Tapes and Digital Mutation songs, on the same album, that she incorporates her deeper, throat-singing vocals into.

And I think there's another Tuvan throat singer I can't think of the name of right now, that does awesome throat singing AND whistling at the same time. I've tried throat singing as is, and have issues...though, I surprisingly do it okay, it just bothers my throat more then it should.

Edit: Oh wait, I think the one you mentioned is the one i'm thinking of.
