Depends on if he consented to it. Since he has cancer, he would be legally eligible for euthanasia should he choose it. If not however, then Prison Until Parole. Murder is Murder.

Depends. If it's used during war time to protect the country, none. If it's used to kill someone, both the buyer and the seller get executed. If it's used for legitimate defence, the buyer gets his weapon seized and the seller get 1 year of prison (unless he has a gun selling permit).

Burying someone alive is considered as an act of Attempted/murder. You will get questioned and if found guilty sentenced to 10 years with a possibility of parole at 4-5 years. If you were forced to do it, EX: mafia, or gang. You will get questioned, and if evidence backs you up, a maximum of 1 year community service.

That's not a crime! That's one of our defining things. In fact, it's encouraged to possess them for the sake of self and communal defense.

Owning, selling or distributing of any military grade equipment is strongly prohibited as this type of weaponry is not produced in Equai and cannot be legally transfered into the country. The individual owning such equipment is charged with unlawfully possession of weapons and arms trafficking. If a person is not cooperative it faces life sentence.

Unlawful sale of medicine may be punished by up to 5 years of imprisonment and up to $250,000 in fines. Possibly commuted to being pressed for up to 360 days of community service if nobody actually bought anything from him.

AN: Two accounts of murder, so probably life in prison or death by hanging. The ownership of a 'meth formula' in and of itself isn't a crime, though if you produced anything through it and sold that, that would also be up to 5 years in prison and up to $250,000 in fines... to be carried out before the life in prison or execution.

Unlawfully, intentionally, and seriously impairing the dignity of a citizen of your country. Would the sentence be any different if it was a resident or a non-citizen?

Brought up on charges of murder and unlicensed drug distribution. Making and distributing drugs is legal in Red Lake, but the process is very heavily regulated and you're not allowed to advertise your products. These are combined with social programs to aid recovering addicts. Any way you slice it, however, you're going to prison for murder and getting fined for distributing drugs.

Prison time, with length depending on the severity of the offense committed. While technically it's unlawful for judges to take such things into account, it often remains the case that if the offense was committed against someone who isn't Gothic (which is a cultural distinction rather than an ethnic distinction; one can become a Goth even if they weren't born one) the judge is more likely to give a lighter sentence. Many human rights groups within and outside of Red Lake consider this to be a massive problem... in fact, there vanishingly few people who think that it isn't anything to worry about.

Unethical human experimentation?

Typically involves death. By cattle bolt, as per usual.

Colossal modern island nation in the North Atlantic. Ruled by a compassionate yet slightly-unhinged king, with a very isolationist yet empathetic populace. Notable characteristics: terrifyingly mighty air force and navy, world famous cars, legendary blend of wildlife.

NS stats are canon except for population; factbook started. Some things are my RL views, some things are not. If curious, feel free to telegram.
