Ugh, I don't know what I want to listen to now that I finished that The National album again....

Saxon Shore-This Place

Think I'll finish with these guys....after listening to random songs of theirs that I've heard of course.

Search around for bands of genres which you are curious about.

I have so many bands backed up I need to go through as is ☐ I just can't decide what type of music I want to go through.

So I decided to add to my massive post-rock/post-metal playlist.

I'm not sure what to go through either. Gothic genres I suppose.

Not really this particular song, but another redeeming quality of post-rock bands is their song names.

Not bad.

Saxon Shore-Secret Fire, Binding Light

It is also interesting at times because you can look at a song name and go "That's a post-rock band". Same with Math Rock sometimes. Strange how the genres have their own style of song names. A lot of times unusually long song names.

I'm most fond of the names gothic bands and songs have.

In dark names, yes □ Though Post-rock has plenty of dark names, too. Metal genres have a lot of generic names too, though. So does Post-Rock. It all depends on the band.

Names aren't that important though, I just like cool names.

My main priority is I like the song. But I have yet to see anything beating gothic names since darkness is aesthetically pleasing and you can't get much darker than gothic.

This sounds kind of....boring. I still think It Doesn't Matter is their most varied and unique post-rock album.

Saxon Shore-The Revolution Will Be Streaming

Ain't that right. Governments trying to hide their brutality and stupidity these days is pointless, since hundreds of millions of people have their own handheld cameras that take 5 seconds to upload to the world on YouTube.

Anyway, skipped that one album because I skimmed over it and it didn't interest me.

Okay, this songs cool because it like, changes strangely throughout the song. They at least vary a lot even if one album bored me.

Satanic black metal usually has generic names, since it's Satanic black metal.

Moonspell - Opium

o:

I found it in HD! I can't resist this song.
