Well it seems like the national cuisine is tortillas with a variety of toppings and the national sport is rhythm games. Frankly I wanna immigrate there.

Every citizen is provided an emergency kit that includes a wide variety of survival gear... and a book of jokes.

I now have a mental image of somebody's survival hinging on whether they 'already know that one'.

At this point, I think a lot of people might have talked about your military stuff a lot of times, so let me go over to the cultural and humanity bits of your factbooks. No, not about the Nazis this time, I promise you that. ^^

The fact that they are very, very competent and passionate engineers bring a warm fuzzy feeling to my heart. I mean, sure, I am not exactly an engineer, but I still has a certain amount of interest in the topics. I wonder if it is just limited to the traditional type of engineering, or does programming count as well? I sure hope so!

Additionally, the fact that they love spicy food. I bet the Godulans will fit right in with the Southeast Asians like us. Trust me, when there is a spicy option, you bet we are going for that!

"Psychologically, Godulans have an innate need to surpass other empires." Does this only apply to the typical "I need to score and do better than you in school" mentality, or just about everything else? That is, maybe I can see a Godulan seeing the need to score better in innovation (since they are engineers), but is there also an innate need to be, say, taller, or has a bigger house than your neighbor?

1. Programming technically falls under computer science, which Godulans lump into electrical engineering and robotics. They're recognize no difference between Artificial and Organic intelligence.

2. OOCly, my brother's wife is Thai. She loves it when I come over because she doesn't have to hold back like she does with Bro. Authentic Phad Thai. Yup.

3. Any form of technology or power they encounter, they are instantly threatened by. Whereas for other civilizations this would generally result in conflict, the Godulans channel their fear into a drive to learn about that which they do not understand. They will figure out how to reproduce it, make some enhancements if they find room for it, adapt their capabilities, and move on. For 'special powers' such as force sensitivity they spent decades working to produce soldiers and strategies to combat force users and eventually developed the M'Lekk'Torr.

In 2014, a Hindu Nationalist party took over in India, beginning a period of tensions between different Indian religious groups. This eventually resulted in said Hindu Nationalist organization basically taking over India and rebranding it into their image and outright stating that they were planning on eradicating Islam from India in only 5 years. Sadly, this did not come to pass.

The two leading parties are the Socialist Party (social democracy or democratic socialism, and online elections) and the Conservative Party (moderate conservatism). They each lead a coalition, with some single-issue and more extreme parties.

A number of reasons -from agricultural reasons to military doctrine and political fact- can be used to justify the fact that the Tohorin have such an obsession with being armed, but in reality, it's a need -genetically coded after centuries upon centuries of history- to be able to defend oneself from the humankind.

So they're an island in the middle of the Atlantic (I'd first assumed they'd be in the Caribbean) of cute anime neko girls (and boys too I guess but no one cares about them) that speak Español after getting Conquistador'ed. Interestingly, they had their own Empire before the whole Spain affair and would even meet and trade with the Romans. They seem to hold close ties with the Latinate countries as they're a member of the "Mediterranean Union" with Spain, Portugal, Italy, and... Greece? Well, they're "Mediterranean", I guess... but Las Palmas isn't tho... eh, I won't question it. Fun fact, the neko don't like being called "neko" because it's "embarrassing" for reasons unclear to me (maybe it's just me being a retard \_(ツ)_/).

You haven't even looked at their factbooks. Take one look and you realize there is zero way you are getting through it.

I notice they tend to spell things weirdly, at first I thought they were mistakes, but it's pretty easy to see that they're not mistakes. I respect in the map of your borders how you changed Europe's borders to fit your custom timeline. Finally, nice flag. Anime girl looks out of place, but hey. You made a unique language to make up for your not so unique nation. Good job.
