"This person could not be any more my opposite if they made an active effort to do so. I can only guess what their overall outlook is by the information presented elsewhere, as they have made themselves less accessible to the general populace than any Adherent I have ever known, including the Great Teachers themselves. This man devotes a great deal of energy towards keeping others ignorant and submissive, to the point that he hides his face and has those who inquire about him arrested. This man is no leader. This man is a coward and a cheat. Were I to encounter this man, and no amount of secrecy can save him from my eyes, I would surely kill him to save others from further pain. It galls me to think that a human could cause me to find kinship with SivvYarros, but the old adage of the Stopped Clock being right twice a day is very appropriate here." -General Achaeus

"By the moon and sun, this guy is a badass General Achaeus, your soul is clearly the soul of warrior, broken by the lands you serve. Your tale is one not told by high hearts, but I think you should keep your head held high, there's always redemption in those that work to wrong their mistakes. You are merely serving a sentence, taking whatever stands in your way and facing it head on, regardless of if you want to or not. Even at the start he had it rough, but I have had my eye on you for awhile. I wish to know him more honestly, and I'm sure we will as time passes. I want to know his goals and how he gets by in such a quest.

He has claimed many achievements, and I don't see it being easy to do so, that much gains my respect." -Luden

"Ah, Liam! This man needs no introduction. Got an art degree in the most legit illegitimate way, stole the title of Overboss from right beneath his predecessor's nose... reading his biography was something like a weird combination between reading the Epic of Arasunus and a starsdamned stoner fanfiction. It was much more fun than biographies tend to be, and I suppose I have his simultaneous immense chill and redneck-ish workaholism to thank for that.

Beyond that, the man is just... chill as hell, but still manages to run his anarchist polity with competence. I mean, I doubt I could ever run a nation in the same way, but he manages to make it work without forming a total cult of personality. His combat prowess is nothing to sneeze at either... I suppose that's what makes his people respect him. All the same, I find it hard to say anything bad about him. I wish him all the best, and I hope he remains chill in all of his endeavors."

For the next person that I'm supposed to give my honest opinion is... an American military officer. A general. The lightning in the background looks pretty sinister. But I'm pretty sure that Mr. Townes is a nice fellow. So you are some kind of engineer who often gets inspired by science fiction. Which is pretty relatable to me. Although your pure pragmatism is a bit... worrying? But anyways, you helped developing directed energy weapons like lasers. Lasers are in my opinion pretty good to use as weaponry. Here on our Earth we also have a lot of military lasers. Although they weren't often the main gun. They were mostly used for anti-air. But enough talking about us, its supposed to be a post about you after all.

So you got a job at the military and were stationed at Fort Union during the GLA war. During the war itself, you helped the US Army fight the GLA. You even took down Dr Thrax's lab where he presumably made some nasty chemical weapons. So from what I understand, everything went well, until the US was forced to pull out... and from there, everything starts crashing down.

So at first you created a safe haven for AI and... dolls? Robots called dolls... I think I've heard of something like that before... in a gacha game where MRI's are personified as anime girls, but lets move on. You started a coup and overthrew the president, turning America into a military dictatorship... oh no.

You decided that a scapegoat was needed to keep you in power. So you started blaming everything on Europeans, which of course led to a genocidal war against them. You are also a control-freak, which certainly explains a few other things. The final thing I have to say is... why blame everything on the Europeans? There are better things to blame the loss to the GLA on. I'm not saying that you should do it, I just think that it doesn't make too much sense.

Its 2027, almost twenty years ago, a storage-facility with mysterious machines was found on the moon. These machines seemed to have the ability to open portals to other dimensions. Armasuintha Siculo, princess of the Goths

I'm not sure the best way to put this, but I guess you could say she is well, batshit insane. many of her policies seem to cross each other. Otherwise, she also seems simply off her rockers even when they are perfectly consistent. I'm not sure how Howard let this one get off, especially by 10, because she joined her local army then, which is a couple years too young in my least humble opinion, she should have waited till puberty. At the very least she seems efficient and powerful, so she must have done SOMETHING somewhere along the line. Not that this seems good given the only place her current plans seem to lead is the nuclear annihilation of her, her nation, and the rest of the world with them, regardless of her mad scheming, that she seems deluded into thinking will save her precious islands.

"Ah, let's see... spoiled royal, cruel disposition, visibly has never worked a day in her life... beyond even her political beliefs, which are horrifying in their own right, these should disqualify her from leadership. Hell, even the policies I agree with seem to come from her cruelty... militarism, not in defense of her people, but seemingly only in aesthetics... opposes capitalism and pacifism, but only because she's a fascist theocrat. Once she takes over, I feel that somehow Crimea is going to become an even worse place, one governed by slavery and the whims of a spoiled dictator. I don't say this often, but the best thing she might do for her country is to take herself out of it, by whatever means are available to her."

Sen. Maj. Leader Hawthorne

"There is very little information to be found about this man... so little, in fact, that I have become very much aware that the more I learn the more I do not know. I know nothing. He's from a middle-class family in a city of 20 million. And he's apparently violent. He lived in a bunker and struggled with authority. Based on his headshot, he also struggled to use shampoo, conditioner, and hair gel. I really don't know what else I'm supposed to say here..."

News: Days after the coronation of Queen Rose I, fifteen Senators have mysteriously vanished after returning to the Capital from a conference in Christine City. Among them is Phillip "Fighting Phil" Paddock, the Chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, who at 98 is the eldest member of the current Senate. President Hinterland issued a short statement of support, joined by Her Majesty the Queen, as the government has executed a number of orders to prioritize the search for the Senators.

Teshida Namikandak: Ok I don't see anything wrong with you Mister Hawthorne, at least based on these papers I've received you seem to be a good guy, competent in running the economy, unlike one of Sherechia's previous leaders... supporting workers rights, not going around murdering people both directly or indirectly. My only issue with you is that you're not tested. Let's see how you handle a major crisis, war, disasters, being surrounded by dictators, and getting arrested in a neighbouring

"Never thought, that a pufferfish can be someone's ancestor... Back on our turf, we believe in a different sort of afterlife. With casinos, booze, weed and naked wenches, ha! Some of us believe in other sorts... Redeemers believe in good ol' Christian Heaven, Hell and the Purgatory. And New Sodom satanists believe, they'll embrace the hell. Azure Shogunate are Shintoists. But I got carried away... Either way, what I can say, is that a person, who was a man of spiritualism and faith, man, who walked different lands and survived in harsh conditions of tall mountains. The one, who introduced faith to Sherechia and meditated on countless aspects of life, cosmos and the spirituality. The one, who according to unconfirmed sources has orchestrated the unification of Sherechia and it's fight against neoliberalism... after death... is the last person I'd expect to hear "Yo' mama" jokes from. Wonder, how will he react to me, if I somehow appear in his dimension, rather than celestial casino with booze? And will I have my cybernetic arm in the afterlife?

And will I make a good pufferfish? Cuz, I ain't exactly spiritual. Yeah, I try to be nice and a good Overboss, but I am not spiritual and find meditation boring. And what is his issue with neoliberalism? Perhaps, he could appear in my dark room, yell "Boo" and then explain. And then we can have a philosophical debate about which is better, order or chaos." "Mr. Navarro is certainly an interesting character, one quite unlike the rather more formal leaders I tend to deal with. I suppose that tends to come with the territory when dealing with a quasi-anarchist entity like the Sky Reavers. His background is certainly unique, and from the sounds of it his university experience was certainly more interesting than mine - up until the revolution, that is. That said, I find his leadership style to be lacking. While I'd assess him as an improvement over his predecessor, he remains overly laid back and lacks the appropriate skill set for a leadership position. I suppose that should once again be expected when dealing with anarcho-libertarian politics, something I have a number of disputes with."

"To conclude, while an interesting person and undoubtedly a fine warrior, I would not consider Navarro to be a suitable leader, although neither would I consider the systems of organisation employed by the Sky Reavers to be a suitable way of governing. That said, I'm not particularly opposed to the man, provided he doesn't decide we need 'liberating' or anything in that vein."
