This cliché is more about the mechanics of the game itself but still is very VERY annoying for a nation that tries to run good NS stats like mine.

You skimover an issue, and the button seems innocuous enough, but when you pick that issue answer it just completely changes your nation. Like for mine, I let the auditors go through government and my taxes dropped from ~40% to ~1.5% which sounds great!

...until I realised it decimated my government-backed industry, defence forces, and safety. Also, people live about a year less than they did before and crime went up by over 10x. Yes, I wanted the taxpayers to get a break but not that much. They should still be paying something!

Now of course there is a way to get around this issue, for the uninitiated - you can use NSIndex. I just forgot and paid the price.

Been there, done that. Several times! Ever wondered as to why my Scientific Advancement graph looks like that? Well, that's why!

Every few weeks they TG Aikoland asking for the numbers from one to ten in Aikoland's fictional Romance languages.

They have been doing this shit for literal years, I remember they had an old account where they even had a thread in F&NI asking for people to share the numbers from one to ten in their fictional languages.

I think it's just one of their obsessions or something.

There's a reason I made a language for the Namo-Moegapepeans, but since then I've expanded it further and updated it so im pretty sure the user has the outdated version

I wouldn't use NSIndex for issue related stuff since:

1. They removed the issue stat effects thing years back (cuz, you know, issue stat effects aren't static)
2. The site's closed from editing, so not all the issues are on the site either way.

Well, for issue related stuff someone also made this:

Got pretty much every issue in there, and it also provides the effects of the solutions to the issues.

It's one of the things that helps me stay here, getting some feedback on my work and seeing how my lore affects the responses of people when talking about my nation.

Must be nice.

So far, on two or three of my nations that are more... well, my own thing. They ask for languages and then the first 10 numbers.

Isn't the NS system uses income tax as the ONLY tax?

Even with quite good number of stats, economics are still reflected simplistically. The best way to increase your economy is cutting taxes, without accounting for public debt, inflation, or quality of economic growth.

First time being here, apparently this is the complainer's hub. So, I'll give my few thoughts in. Absolutely hate being called 15 year old. Like come on? If that's all you'll bring to the table, better not say anything then.

Normally, such things shouldn't matter since after all this is supposed to be a chill forum. But, going for a break and then being rewarded with that garbage. It broke a nerve.
