I think if you use the [center] tag rather than the [align-center] tag you should be able to make it center, and then using align tags within the spoiler you can force the text back to their proper positions if need be.

Actually the best way to protect code is to not put it out on public internet or even on the internet in general. Same goes with personal information generally speaking. Closed source is the abomination that ends society.

Bawks in Postmaster General.

Though yeah, I do see it on my other nations. 🤔 Good times! Ohh man, good ol' times of 2015 whereby Valentine was an absolute newbie without any direction. Because of how I started off, i.e. no Discord, no one else on this site I know, all because a RL friend recommended this game to me... I was super lost. Like being thrown into an ocean without a float.

If you're implying that's contradictory it's not.

You can technically have Open source or free software without actually distributing the source to malicious actors. It's out in the wild then it's out and there's nothing you can do about it to restrict the distribution. And if it's supposed to be a security software that's better to let them tinker with it, it's supposed to be infallible or nearly so.

It's pretty contradictory considering we're talking about BBcode. It's either open source or it's not, and the only way for your factbooks to become open source is for you to post your code somewhere, short of someone recreating it.

Not really. In the particular case of NationStates, your factbooks are by their very nature open source as literally anyone can find their code without doing any work. All they need to do is slap a "/raw=1" to your factbook's link in dispatch form. Any regulations on your code and who has the right to use it is strictly based on an honour system.
