President Harry Thomley

If it isn't the leader of the great satan himself. General James Pinpoint Townes. Acting president of the United States. I've heard a bunch of things about you. None of them are good. Except maybe the adaption of laser technology, but that's where it ends.

You're a miserable man leading a miserable country with a miserable population. You took over the country after a period of isolationism, because your army couldn't even defeat a bunch of middle easterners. And of course, you couldn't take the responsibility of your actions. So you needed a scapegoat. Someone to blame for all of your problems. The Europeans. Our people. You turned the nation into a war machine in an attempt to kill us all. All to save your own pathetic skin.

The American "people" like to pride themselves on their "freedoms." But you just showed their true nature. Your excuses about "having to do this, or risk being lynched" only shows this further. They do not want freedom. They are all savages! Savages who think the only way to solve their problems is to kill their enemies. You may point at me, and call me a hypocrite for my stance against the Americans, but I already know that I'm a savage. We Europeans have all been turned into savages because of what people like YOU did. Americans like you tried to invade and conquer us, and because of that, the entire world has been reverted back to post-nuclear savages. You may hide your national abomination under a façade of civilization, but I know better than that. We are all savages in a savage world. Turned into beasts because of our circumstances. We all know that it would solve none of our problems. That it will most likely only make them worse. At least we Europeans don't try to hide it that we know that it isn't about justice. I know that it isn't. Its about revenge... about... about...

About a pathetic attempt to make me feel better...

I need to go now.

RESPONSE FROM THE MINISTER

"General Harry Thomley, President of the European Remnant... What an interesting fellow. Motivated by the desire to dwarf your sister's accomplishments you went to study neurology, and pioneered the construction of a brain-computer neural link. What I would give to get my hands on such technology. Immortality, omniscience, a form of being beyond the comprehension of our feeble human brains. Yet you decided to allow the common idiots access to this world changing technology. Colour me disappointed.

Next you joined the army as a field medic. But the death, the pain you saw made you quit your job as a medic and enroll in the military academy. I suppose you wanted to be more than a mere reactive agent. A medic can but try to assuage the collateral suffering the powerful's wars cause. But as a General you'd have the power to decide who died and who lived yourself.

You were made a General in a world very much like mine, under siege by rampant resource deprivation. As the great powers turned against each other in wars of aggression over control of the few remaining resources unplucked from the earth, you were deployed in a series of proxy wars before the final great war.

The Yankees, lost into inefficient authoritarianism that so often arises in this nation, attacked your European Union. Soon nuclear war ravaged your homeland. With the continent plunged into chaos and nuclear fire you took absolute power. I can admire that. A well executed ploy, even if it was purely opportunistic and cloaked under the guise of patriotism.

And you realised that if you want something well done you have to see to it yourself. You used your neural link to upload yourself into a computer. Immortal, how I envy that, you could free yourself from the fear of death and extend your gaze upon all the continent. Now, you stand poised for the reconquest of your homeland.

And now, you seem to be abandoning the idealistic patriotism of old and realising that power is a goal onto itself.

And that it is not a commodity to be given but a right for the strong to claim.
Good luck to you and may your revenge
be fulfilled."
- Mr. Chairman

RESPONSE FROM THE MINISTER

"Artyom Bishop, you are a tyrant in the purest sense of the word. Those policies of yours make no sense, have no north but to scare the populace into apathy or rebellion. And now, as your body fails you, what have you to look back to? A traumatised nation with no purpose, an infighting court with no soul."

"Heya all! Guess who's back from their long hiatus from even doing anything in this weird place? Is it a bird, is it a fi-

Okay, okay... I'm not that important for anyone to feel it necessary to "remember" me. But either way, it's nice to be back in this weird Seventh Forum place again! There's always something nice and entertaining about it all, and through here I've learnt about not just random people, but people I've come to know as friends as well!

I'm looking at you two, Ana, Yunnie!

Anywho, who've we got to look at today? Hmm..

Oh, hey Mr. Harry Thornley! I still don't quite get these whole "President" words and what it's supposed to mean, but it's fine, it's fine. Are you doing okay today? Insert other pleasantries of note here, teehee! Right, anyway, I should probably move onto the actual reason anyone does anything here, and that's to review and talk about the person above. Let's stop talking nonsensically for a moment and start, right?

Right then, so you were brought into the world in a place called Plymouth, right? No idea what and where that is, and even Ametu herself hasn't talked about the place yet, so let's just move on. This description about you doesn't go too far into what went on during childhood, which is fine! Honestly, my one doesn't do that too much either, beyond some mentioning how much I loved M... Mother... *ahem* *ahem! So I guess we're both guilty on that front! But what it does mention is that you always felt like you were in the shadow of your older sister, right? Honestly, I'm an only child myself so I can't relate in the slightest, but maybe I should ask that same Ametu about that and see if she can relate, hehehe! But hey, at least you managed to find your own way out of her metaphorical shadow by going into something called Biology? Studying the human bod- oh that makes sense actually. What a posh word for it though, eh?

And during your studies or something like that you managed to help develop this machine thing which gives people the ability to uhm.. Control a computer telepathically or something? Cool! Cool, even if I can't even begin to fathom what that means. Though at least it was some grand achievement for you that helped you not feel so insignificant compared to your family.

Okay, a year later you joined "British" Army as a medic, right? Medic means healer, I assume. That's nice of you to do! Though I guess you couldn't go through your career without seeing some horrors - I'm so sorry for you - what with all the deaths you had to see in a place called Kenya, and then going on to the future where you - as some General had helped command a load of soldiers in a place called Arabia, I assume - had to witness carnage and destruction that reminded you of your medic days within Kenya? I know that stuff hasn't really been elaborated on in your description, but I assume seeing all of that must've been horrible. I mean, I've seen one major, gruesome death myself and that's... That's been really hard on me... I couldn't imagine multiplying that by... Goddesses knows how much.

So uhm.. Your next fight would be with some sort of American authority realm or something, right? That reminds me though, have you ever heard of a guy called Townes? I think he leads something like that himself actually, an- oh wait, he was the one above you in this topic thing? Alright, change of question slightly, did you hear of Townes before you talked about him like I'm now talking about you?

Okay, so in a place called "Greenland" - wow, it must be a lovely and colourful place with that kind of name! - you all managed to stall an invasion by said Americans but... Then something really bad happened...

I don't know much about these "nuclear" thingys, but I get the feeling that they must be really, really bad... To the point where a few of the could damn an entire world, which is what happened to your own? I-I'm so sorry to hear about that, Harry. It really must've been awful, and it makes what I've experienced look pathetic in comparison, right?... Hu... Huh, right. So uhm, after that, you became very driven for your cause of making people immortal, right? By... Translating their minds to machines? That's very strange, but okay. And in a year of "2077" you managed that, and you became the first test subject, right?

So uhm... Decades later you're trying to reunite what's left of this Europe place out of this thing called "revanchism"... T-towards the Americans. O-okay, you're sounding kinda similar to that Townes guy even more now, because I'm reading that your one sole goal is to enact revenge on the Americans for seemingly causing that "nuclear war" thing by... E-exterminating themall?

Farore's courage, that's horrible Harry! Sure, the authority might've made mistakes, but come on! Not EVERY SINGLE person there could be guilty! That's like, completely impossible!.. Uhm.. Look, I'm going to try and talk about something similar that happened in my world for a moment so you can get a bit of an outside perspective?

Alright, so the Twilight Crisis... There's these beings in a completely separate dimension known as the "Twilight Realm" called, funnily enough, the Twili. These Twili are a bit crazy, but for the most part they're just supposed to be like you and I, at least that's what I've come to believe after talking some with one of them. There was this one Twili that, by getting some power from Denise managed to take over the Twilight and then try and invade and assimilate my own world... This lead to a lot of things, including said one Twili uhm.. R-r... Ripping apart... Rutela, mmother in front of my eyes...

G-give me a moment...

Alright, I've recovered now. Sorry you had to see that. Anyways, he would've got his wish if Link and another Twili didn't stop him.

But nowadays, despite what everyone's experienced, despite what the Twilight did, and tried to do, we don't necessarily put blame on everything Twilight! The monsters Zant used basically didn't even have a mind from what I've heard, and everyone just blames Zant and Denise for what happened. None of us who know exactly what happened care to "exterminate the Twili"...

I guess what I'm trying to say is, you don't have to exterminate the Americans either! 99% of them really didn't have any say as to what happened, so don't go after the innocent people. It'd be horrible if you did, as well as quite plainly ridiculous to boot! And Harry, I know you kinda know this...

If you want my suggestion, just focus all of your energy and need to help Europe by trying to rebuild it, yeah? I-I know it'll be hard to break your mindset, by Hylia it was hard for me to stop being anything but depressed and sick of life when Rutela died, but if I could break out of it you can too! Just try, okay? That's all anyone can ask.

A-anyways, it's been nice talking about you, Harry... I can't say I "wish you the best" properly right now, what with your goal in mind, but I do hope you manage to find a way to be rid of that toxic mind of yours and help steer your people to a better, kinder future!"

For crying out loud...

I know it can't be helped... Like, ever and I don't blame anyone for it, but...

Goddesses Gods be damned, I sometimes HATE being ninja'd!

"The Designated Leader "Jerry Brown", who looks more like a popular tanned Hollywood actor than the ranting ideologue of any state has concocted an ideology of unparalleled eloquent truisms and incomprehensible gibberish of unparalleled proportions. However, under further analysis and deconstruction we can see that this concocted ideology is no more than bourgeois deviationisms created to shoulder down the collapse of bourgeois liberalism.

The constructed ideology of Ex Machina is bourgeois and fascistic-lite in its purpose, as it serves to remove and shove away as unimportant all class distinctions in Ex Machina in favor of an idealistic collectivism. Jerry Brown's critique of the bourgeois democracy, while perhaps enlightened and advanced, is archaic in that it ignored the imperialist labor aristocracy of America during the 20th-21st century, and is defending his thought based on an old premise. The new state in Ex Machina is run by a new elite - the "Psychotechnicians of the Institute of Ethical Research" and the secret police of the "Joy Division" who did not even bother to mask their oppression in good-sounding language, but are honest in their all-encompassing state surveillance and the citizens being oppressed by nonsensical state activities and routines, Zen pseudoscience and drugging in an unparalleled state program in all of human history!

The class distinctions have been imaginatively swept away, forgotten, ruled by a bourgeois clique led by Jerry Brown, in an "utopia" and a "happy" state - an "Eden" if Hell is to be called Heaven and if one is to call "Nightmares full of Faceless Night Terrors" as "Sexy Wet Dreams"! Though it is clear that there are still bourgeoisie, petty-bourgeoisie in this fascist state of Ex Machina, especially the privileged class that serves Mr. Jerry Brown in the accurately named Psychotechnicians of the Institute of Ethical Research and the Joy Division! Whose class is this bourgeoisie and the petty-bourgeoisie oppressing? The proletariat? Is there a proletariat in Ex Machina? In the next chapter - we will analyze the imperialist position of Ex Machina in the global economy, and analyze if a labor aristocracy exists in Ex Machina, to know what purpose does the privileged class under the auspices of the Ex Machina's state serves (High Princess Ryeisse Schyi Yuri had never returned to complete this part though...)

Noted with, thanks! Her politics are certainly an interesting one, though we will admit that, well, her origin is relatively a hero's story - peasant girl, rose up to the ranks, fought against the classes and the bourgeois. Still, she is not someone who is wholly a communist, if we look at the For-Against section that has been highlighted for us. The politics and the civil right violations that possibly may follow have an equally valid reaction, and it is quite an alarm for concern that she seems very much, err... violent. I know I am the one to talk, but we are not the one to actively go out and attack someone or assassinate our opponents. Waldemar Rochester

"Nerrias Adam Gregory, a man of sincere contradictions! Or that's how they put it! Personally, I have mixed feeling about him, mostly positive feelings. For a start, I was horrified to see him experience systemic racism in his community, but I was glad to see him escape it. My ancestors had a similar story, when they escaped the Congo long ago to come here, in Crossoveria. Anyways, moving on. I am proud that he joined Zoigai's Army soon afterwards, since I was a former Army General. I also find it impressive that he can destroy large land masses, and his role in his first war is very admirable, because he helped his country win it. His service in the Army makes me immensely proud of him, even if he is not from Crossoveria. Moving on from the military time, I do really like this man. We share common interests in writing, and similar ideologies for national unity and mixed market capitalism, and I see that he is a devout man, which I definitely support. But I also see he's against genocide. In that case, why would people hold him responsible for 30 million deaths then. That sounds kind of contradictory, doesn't it? He's also against Easter and Christmas, but aren't those religious holidays too? Either way, I really do think he truly is a man of contradictions, given what I have learned from him. A very interesting person indeed."

disputing respect over common sense

He is a noble person, one who has proven his might and righteousness to rule over his people through many fights and wars he fought- something I both laud and can most certainly relate with. Far too many leaders believe that they should be ruling over their subjects purely because of said subjects liking them, or rather purely because of their blood. Although it is unfortunately commoner blood which runs through his veins, it should be noted that for his deeds I'd most certainly consider him to be eligible for peerage, that's for sure! We may have some disagreements here and there, for instance, I do not understand why the government should discriminate between different gender behavior preferences, however I can see that he rules his subjects wisely- and as long as it doesn't interlope with our needs and deeds, that would be all I would care for.

*"Behind every so-called "charitable" politician is a cold-hearted murderer, building trust only stab them in the back when their guard is down. It is a strategy I have used to quell the remaining opposition by winning the distraught unreasonably weary of the new regime. But brought to the light, when my policies benefited them, and thus any derange criticism of the New Order fell on deaf ears, isolated with the last sound being a knock at the door in the dead of night. Though, it was merely not to just consolidate power, but to ensure order as it is common sense for me to ensure the people prosper. That instinct to fight and lead from the very front, to move forwards on your path no matter the cost, it reminds me of myself. Irenton is an example of why us huffmanians are so hostile to tradition, because tradition always leads to ceasarist barbarity. All nation states with tradition results in tyranny and unhappiness. However, if you value progress, you strive, and I would know, because I've seen it myself
