"He as an individual is fine in my book. However, the entire of his race is a different story as they seem to be driven to be barbaric and chaotic as mortally possible so their "country" is forever trapped in the endless tides of primal slaughter and misery. And the only way I can see them progress is through brute force, which the Imperium will provide as it is not the Zeffarian way to allow any race to be imprisoned by the corruption that consumes them."

However, IF his views were to be applied in a non-dying society, I will not tolerate it at all. What happened to Vanderbilt was tragic let's hope he can change his mindset to a more capitalistic one."

"Ari really is one of the more interesting characters I have met in my life, I will say that.

Now, I ain't gonna rag on her for her nomadic nature. My brothers to the East and my friends to the North and West would cherish such a lifestyle. And you know what, raiding is something excusable when you're trying to survive - rather than trying to bully weaker nations into submission. Hell, I see a lot of that same freedom fighter spirit I had a long time ago.

But where was I? Yes. I can appreciate the fact that she seems to be - well - a leader. I'll admit, we've both had our fair share of political moves. But at the end of the day, she's a leader - not a ruler. She ain't some petty queen barking orders at the peasants below or some stuck-up bureaucrat pushing papers 9 to 5, she's a leader. She's willing to pull her own weight and then some, all in the name of her tribe. And it's funny, a person like her would be one of the last places I would expect leadership from. A shy kid with anger issues whose 'formal' appearance is copying her daddy because she has no charisma of her own. Hate to sound like a downer, but that don't exactly sound like the foundations of a strong political character. And yet, here we are. Guess things truly are strange in the bush, huh?

She's a good kid. And yes, I can call you that. You're only 21. You can barely get drunk. So, even if her policies are few and your political enemies many, I see a fire in you that will only grow in time. Good luck to you, ma'am."

AAN:

"So a poet became a national leader of sorts. In a strange triumvirate to my understanding, but it's strange to see rule by artists. I suppose they'd see it as leadership by visionaries. If Otto is the effective leader of this breakaway state, I'm in a somewhat conflicted position. There seems to be a really effort to somewhat stabilise and impose order, and yet...it's done in more in accordance with chaos than order. A supposed Cult of Reason- when has calling something a cult ever boded well- has formed, yet he seems more devoted to anarchy than to anything else. It's just that he'd rather the stampedes of violent chaos take place against his rivals. A directed form of mindless hedonism and sadism that reflects some of the most cruel and reckless impulses in our nature. I can hear him now, muttering something She would say. Embracing our inner impulses, blaming everyone but ourselves for the cause of our self-destruction...just look at what goes on in this barely-controlled scattering of mobs. He's destroying every trace of the past, removing every abandoned legacy in the vain hope of forging a new one in blood and pandemonium. This is kind of man who unleashed criminals upon the population in some desperate effort to maintain the worst aspects of control. This is tyranny's antithesis in an even more depressing way than democracy tends to be. Not to mention the lustful reduction of half the population into objects of hedonism even Gikochinai would find shameful. I said before I was conflicted, but the more I learn of this man and his actions...he's not so much a national leader as he is a desperate showman trying to pull the right strings before the stage collapses into flames. He has a futile struggle ahead of him. Chaos begets only chaos. This division is only going to get worse and worse until someone imposes a proper system of order that isn't based around a ruthless cycle of misdirected violence and sadistic hedonism. Until then, I'd say Otto has only a legacy of ash and corpses ahead of him."

-Aozora Chiyumi, Supreme Overlady of All Reality

AN: "It's difficult to say a whole lot about...whatever the heck...she is? There's the whole distorted image thing, which makes me assume some kind of secret identity. Or maybe an otherworldly manifestation beyond our reality? I don't think that though. The way she communicates makes me feel it's more like a filter than anything. I'm assuming she has some kind of business arrangement more than a country. I don't know what for. Selling...worm food? That's dirt. It's literally just dirt. Or maybe it's a metaphor for some assassin service? I get the feeling they're more ominous than the words alone imply, but then I also wouldn't be surprised if it was someone in their basement with a camera filter and a low-quality radio trying to frame a fast food delivery service as somehow dangerous. Now that I look at her, is she...made up of worms? I honestly have nothing more to say. What else can I say? There's basically nothing to go on example rambling theories and guesses. Just don't deliver anything to my doorstep if you want to keep your head."

Lewis Hyatt X. Constantine Sein Lin Zaw Naing: It has been a while since I have the honor of meeting someone such as Kyoki. Yes, it is an honor, despite the differences that we have with one another, and perhaps the dictatorial and torturing nature of herself. Rules through fear, doesn't care about doing war crimes, tyrant, just about everything else. This, I am all unfortunately unaware of. Despite all of this, she is certainly... something, for the lack of a better word. She at least has a degree of feelings and hobbies that are not all just about torture - even if I am sure that those cookies are poisoned half the time in an attempt to offer it to unsuspecting leaders - and the fact that she is not a discriminating type and equality for all. Too bad that equality for all was less for loving people and more of "I like to torture and hurt everyone regardless of their race or gender." I am inclined to end this on a neutral term.

As for you Libertarian friends, I find you both rather... interesting. I don't want to use boring, because it would certainly be discouraging, but after reading through your dossiers a few times, it lead me to believe that you both have quite a good set of beliefs - freedom and equality. This is, for all purposes and intent, still weird that I would love such a freedom because of my rule as an autocracy, but hey, I am a fan of civil rights, even if the political freedoms are a little bit on the lows. I will say I have to look over your careers with great interest, because I am not very sure about this development just yet.

"No, I do not trust this man and I do not trust how his official information hub relays to us his numerous achievements without explaining how all of them came into being. I thought that Svenska-Britannia, being a gigantuan empire that it is, would have been a developed country before Charles and Grace took the throne and seemingly turned the country upside-down. I mean, in modern times, slavery should have been illegal since ages ago and not just now. Well, this does not mean I doubt everything, I just have this question of how the sovereign chooses to portray themselves as efficient and flawless, but then offer no evidence to back their claims. This is normally the circumstance for populist propaganda. Perhaps it is true that he who controls the past, controls the future."

"Moreover, the King's action of abolishing nobility while still remaining the monarch of the empire is more or less suspicious. True, the people might have cheered him, but that action is, in most cases, an act of power consolidation - or in other words, he gained more power to himself. Moreover, while I do not doubt that he had indeed served in the military, his nation has a fairly archaic set of strategies and tactics in contrast to the modern weaponry. Everything in there has a sense of anachronism, and not exactly great one."

"I will reserve my deepest of opinions for now. You see, I hold my head as high as any sovereign does and I respect every sovereign equally until proven otherwise. But I will not shake hands with a man whose claims are unverified. Even Dozdcheny's delegates are more open to me than his dispatch."

PMT/Early FT - Decopunk. Zitragrad is a crowned republic in a planet somewhere else in the universe. The formerly wartorn nation keeps a facade of normalcy and order while enjoying the societal and cultural decadence that marks the new Roaring Twenties. The paranoid authoritarian government tries its best to uphold order in the face of uncertainty, while its people want nothing more than a breathing space. A deal that works, but maybe not in the long run. |

"Whereas many- such as this Kazimir figure- might consider it necessary to project objectivity or some other manipulative ploy when offering their opinions, I will remain in the honest light of truth and solid criticism. Were I still a young man, as he is, I think I would admire his eloquent work ethic and bravery in the face of pain... However, age ruins all things, and any respect I would enjoy having for him is similarly decayed- his personality strikes me as wrong, and I don't know what it is, but his refusal to enjoy life or even indulge in the more... well, indulgent parts of it impresses upon me a feeling of personal insult- it is, I think, as if he is attacking the whole of my being, though I know not why... Besides that, however, his choice of wife is... well, I shall not get too far into the details, but while I can and do admire her aesthetically, her arrogance of intelligence is entirely unbecoming of her type. Ah, but finishing off with my little assessment of Kazimir, I suppose it would be fairest to say that my opinion of him is as such- a blind idol for whom the young and naïve can gravitate towards, his virtues are all too often turned to vices by the barbarous environment and peoples he was raised amongst."

-Trokondas, Lord of Isauria and King of the Romans.

(BN you can do either Lord Trokondas or Princess Euphrosyne, whichever you prefer)

Take 2 on being active, let's see how it goes!

Alt. of Hamatu

Late Medieval (Set 1239 CE). A Byzantine Successor State. Maybe Magical, Maybe Not. Has Some Indigenous Anatolian Influences

Technically Religiously Syncretic (Byzantine Orthodox Saints - Ancient Anatolian Deities). Not Crusaders (Again, Not Crusaders). But Definitely Character-Oriented (Lord Trokondas/Princess Euphrosyne/Lady Bassaine)

"The leader of a misotheistic crusade. I'd probably do the same thing if I believed in anything like heaven or hell. I think our greatest similarity is in that regard. We both understand that if some celestial being created the universe, they did a pretty terrible job of it. So I have respect for his goals, even if he is apparently a terrorist of sorts. I'm not endorsing reason, but I'm not exactly fond of divinity myself. Impressive to get as much done as he has at his age, too. Always nice to see people starting early in their efforts. With that said, I have the feeling that we would not get along very well. This ruthless expansionism that he performs, while probably necessary, is not something I want happening anywhere near my world. I don't trust him not to do something stupid and send that mothership of his to take something that doesn't belong to him. And let's be honest, I don't trust anyone who claims they can read minds- especially if they can. Last time someone did that to me it did not end well for them, so he better not try anything. And travelling between realities at faster-than-light speeds...look. I don't necessarily disagree with what he's doing. If there's someone with overthrowing, it's what he's trying to fight against. At the same time, I don't think I'd trust him as an all-powerful creator being any more than I would anyone else. I mean, what is utopia to him? Probably not something I'd appreciate, I can guess that much. So don't rope my reality into your celestial conflict and you have my vague possible moral support, got it?"

"Ahh it's a name that echoes through the recent history of Lowbloods, faintly, but definitely. As Low hated the way you treated your people I feel the same way. When curiosity grows its best not to let it grow out of hand or you might just make a monster.

Or in your case, you might just become one. But I should say our case, My case is appearance, your case is rather more mentality... But I must admit, when science is unrestricted, it gains results.

But when it doesn't and those suffer due to such foolish attempts. It twists my stomach, the horrors I've seen.

As for you, Oni has stated that you hide it by branding those as traitors, and sure testing on scum is something I don't see as a problem, until you ponder and discover what that King of corpse did.

But sure enough You and Oni seemed to have well relations, which baffles me, was it because you wanted to discover the genetics for his species? Hes not exactly the same as you.

Perhaps in the future I will understand you more, I believe one has to set aside their moral compass to become more familiar to a soul like the one you hold.

And doing that will require a bit more, comfort on my end."-Luden
