I'm sorry that my post wasn't quite to your standards, I assumed that that was the person they wanted someone to respond to, and I just don't think there is a lot to say. Sometimes someone won't always get a great response, there is a degree of maturity in expecting that possibility may occur and just waiting the next time. And I go into not just this thread expecting it's a possibility, but a whole sort of threads with the expectation that I might not get a response I particularly like, what does anger me is when I'm just outright skipped, I don't mind a underwhelming response, my blood does boil when I'm intentionally skipped.

Sorry, I don't think Constantine would have a lot to say about someone who is a pirate, there is just a hard sell for a someone like him.

I admit maybe if there wasn't too much to go with for that specific leader I could look to see if there were better options, but oh well. Now I don't mind if someone decides to do both of us, I'm always up for people responding to two people, like in cases of when someone accidentally responds at the same time as someone else and doesn't change their post.

But this is just poor behavior on your part.

Onox:

James Oliver: So let me get this straight, you are a warlord who can shape shift into multiple things including a dragon, goes around murdering people and ransacking entire nations, and likes to get black out drunk. It's almost as if you're a child of the unholy marriage between a warlord and pirate. So as much as I disagree with you, you probably have enough stories to cover my media company for the next year or so. So, care for an interview for next week's magazine, mister?

Inogo Estima: To summarize James' ramblings, you are very naughty but it doesn't mean that I hate you, well, I will if you decide to sack Sherechia but hey you're in another universe which has some different standards to ours so I won't judge for now. So you don't like abstinence? Does this mean you [absolutely redacted]

Anyway you respect people who stand for themselves which explains your claim of being a gentleman knight. Idk mate you don't look very gentlemanly to me, not that I'm any better than you. So, I'm going to take over James' role here but what if your raiding empire collapses and you are held on gunpoint? Would you respect your enemies or spit on their eyes? You know just a hypothetical scenario.

Now I think world leaders attempting to ride Daikan is hilarious but not for you because forgive me for saying this but you're rather fat and your armor is probably as heavy as my car so you might kill my steed mate and that won't be nice for me. So don't even try.

Also, I still think your armor is gaudy and tasteless, sorry. I even got to wear it and it smells awful.

Prince of the Zora, Ralis

"Hey, look who it is! Inogo, nice to see you, my not-connected-to-my-world friend! By the Goddesses' that is quite the mouthful, isn't it? I never would've expected that we'd ever have the pleasure of meeting until that little escapade of ours a few days or so ago, you know with your whole arrival to my little fishing spot and then stumbling head-first into that strange plaza-like place, right? But hey, if there was any multi-dimensional being I could've met, I don't think you're at all the worst choice, eh? Wait... Oh yeah, this place is public or something, isn't it? Ooops, hope you don't mind that I just said all of that out loud!

So anyways, I'm back in "action" over here in this whole Forum 7 place again. The Zora's Domain can get quite mundane at times, we all kind of operate like a machine of sorts, you know? Wake up, go fish up our breakfast, lunch and supper or whatever, do some family stuff with each other or go out on the figurative prowl as a Guardsman or Woman, then head off to sleep. So despite my position, I'm hardly as busy as Zelda, for example!

Though Avie and I did host a little get-together recently, mainly to discuss the future of the Zora in this world of ours, which... Well, me and the Regent disagreed with a few things, but no matter!

So, I have the pleasure to read through and give my two cents about your little detailing, Inogo? Well hey, don't mind if I do! Your mother...

* ahem* Mother and Father brought you into this world in this place called Meran, eh? I'm seeing that picture you have there to show what it looks like, and... Well, it looks kind of Kakariko Village-esque, without that canyon surrounding it, of course! Which reminds me Inogo, have you even managed to go around seeing those Hyrulean settlements? If not, you probably don't know what I'm talking about,

but hey ho!
So you went to a School, which I'm guessing must be like an institution of sorts which just goes ahead and gets people
educated,
right? I mean
over here that stuff mostly falls down to your parents, but that seems like a good step
above, really!
Well, except the whole
bullying thing
that you mentioned you
had to go through, which is so sad... I mean, I'm glad that you found yourself
through that,
but not without
a few issues...
Heh,
understatement
of the century,
that one! I'm guessing you
struggled in actually using School to actually learn
when you had those scoundrels,
which let's hope the thing we have to rely on, you know...
Family managed to pick up the pieces for you!
You turned out
alright though,
from what I've seen of you.
Now, this bully
of yours
decided to use
one of those...
Uhm, Daikan -
esque animals to "Knock you over", and instead of doing that you... Got torn apart? Oh, by the Goddesses that sounds awful!
Like, innardsoutards, right?

Well, I have never had that happened to me, but... Well... I. I saw it happen...

To Mother..."

(A note from Regent Avavu: The Prince of the Zora currently suffers from a bout of sadness... I feel as if it would be the civic duty of myself as to let the recipient of said opinion piece know of such a development...)

"Sorry... Sorry... I think I have recovered now... That hit very close to home... At least you didn't meet the same fate as mother, but you did go to some afterlife, where a... Wait, a leader of your country before your time decided to give you some sort of gift and send you on your way? I don't think I have ever seen this gift in action yet, but hey ho... I'll try to ignore the part about your previous leader and how he even gained the power of a Deity to do that, unless he was actually aided by one... That Khosonkhande fellow you talked about with me before, perhaps? Anyways, you returned, much to the surprise of those looking after you! You seemed surprisingly right as rain, and of course they'd go around claiming that the Gods and Goddesses had a hand in it, after all that's not something that a simple Potion could fix, I know that...

So, you went back to school eventually, saved a guy called Atkhal Daishin with your new divine powers or whatever, and you'd actually lead him later on, eh? Quite funny how stuff like that works, and in return he helped you out with Maths or something, so there is that! Oh, and you also met Daikan, that funny little thing during the early 2000s, right? Whatever that means... You even was able to calm him down from stampeding as he likes doing during a "Earthquake", so good on you for that one... Your school didn't do as well as you and Daikan though, did it? I hope nobody got too injured by it! That'd be quite sad...

Okay, so becoming leader was quite quick and violent, wasn't it Inogo? The whole "Some scoundrel sold off your village for demolition so some mining company could take it's place" to revolting against the demolition crew

and killing it's guards then the military who eventually stepped in,
before
marching into this "Aruday"
place to get rid of those above
you, right? Well, they must have been bad for you to do that!
Now, you did get caught and thrown in some dingy place to be... Beaten...
That's so bad!
But at least you weren't executed, as
that Kai guy from the afterlife told you that you wouldn't and lo
and behold, you
were busted
out by your compatriots
before you could die or whatever... Talk about a lucky
break! To think you were that close to biting it, and in the future I wouldn't have been able to see you, eh?
Oh, and you
also wouldn't be leading your people as well, there's that as well : P

Now... Things
got dark, which is quite sad...
So you didn't have too much of a hand in it right? Not until later which I'll get onto in a bit, but before and after you
became leader
you kind of just had to stand by as your fellow
compatriots
went on what was basically a

killing spree across the country against the people
before them which... Well, maybe they were bad but that's no
excuse for mass
murder, right?
Uhm, well I don't think I'll be giving too much of a review of these Leadership
things you've done, though
most of them
sound alright...
The jargon kind
of just falls over
my head...
Anyways,
eventually you'd be executing
people and using Daikan to
gouge people, which... Well, I think you fell to pressures like that out of anger or frustration, or even because you felt like it was right... Now
I like you Inogo,
I really do but that wasn't right... Not at
all. You need to give them
people a fair shake before you punish them, because you'd be just like them if you fall to those standards... But I won't rage on
about it,
because you
seem to be trying to help yourself and
this random guy
and even Daikan
taught you not to, which good for them
I... Yeah, I don't think I'm taking that revelation
too seriously...
They did cause
their own fair
share of deaths,
and though

what you did was a little repugnant but I'm just glad you went around fixing yourself with this therapy, and from what we've talked you seemed to have ironed out your problems somewhat well?

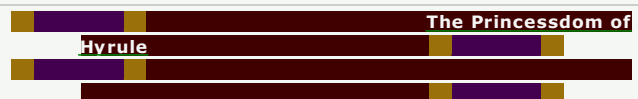

Uhm... So I would go on, but Avie's actually pestering me to take care of myself now, after that whole... Thing about being gouged, and it reminding me of what that complete... Complete bastard did to mother. I would've talked about you personally, but I'm sorry that I can't, Inogo! But I think you already know how I feel about you at this point, so no harm done I hope? See you, Inogo... Here's to more time to talk together, eh?

Hello BN!

"And so falls onto my desk a document on an Atlantian general, after a deeply distressing slew of communiques regarding the Ostkrieg and the Federation's involvement there. Knowing the usual contents of these intelligence assets, this is going to either be a highly interesting or highly frustrating read...From the top."

"It is readily apparent to me that Herr Butler is a rather eccentric and tragic figure. It comes to immediate notice that he is a communist, but the picture that follows of the man is not some insane firebrand revolutionary, but rather that of a man who saw the worst of what the old world had to offer. A veteran of not only a very different Atlanto-Ispanian War, but also of the Weltkrieg and numerous smaller conflicts in Meridia and even Ruthenia, he has seen the terrible and ugly face of the modern battlefield. More importantly, he has lived to suffer the guilty conscience that comes with losing so many thousands of men and boys under your watch. No witness to the glory or triumph trumpeted about in those olden days, when war was a hell so much farther away from Europa's shores, only slaughter on a scale he must have scarcely imagined possible..."

"His time in Ispania was perhaps the worst, having lost thousands upon thousands of men in a single military action. Another person might note they would shudder to imagine that manner of carnage, but unfortunately I am all too familiar...Very few positive things can result from such loss of life, but it can be said that he learned the bloody lessons of war early on in Ispania and was careful not to allow them to suffer the same brutal end in any of his subsequent assignments. It is at best a small victory to keep casualties to minimum levels, especially in the hell that must have been his world's Weltkrieg, but nonetheless he achieved it. When possible he even attempted to do so with the enemy's lives. Mad, but certainly more admirable than adding to the number of dead."

"After his service he returned home a hero, graced with all manner of medals and finery. But his time abroad had made into a rather conscious socialist, and one quite willing to make his opinions known on political matters. Mildly understandable, given the network he had been assigned in Meridia. Which makes it all the more odd that a cabal of nationalistic business magnates and politicians attempted to rope him into a plot to overthrow the Union's government...And mein Gott is that familiar...Fortunately for the Atlantian people, they chose the wrong man for the coup, and Butler was the one to make sure the efforts of the Black Plotters ended in failure. Ironic, it was this collectivist ideologue that safeguarded democracy and prevented the bloody Second Civil War that his country suffered on our side of the spatial-temporal pond. And more than that, became a voice of moderation and sanity for the country in the afterward."

"I cannot say I share the man's politics, far from it, but the old General is a man I could consider to be eminently reasonable. Even in spite of the troops' nicknaming him 'The Mad Quaker'.

"This. This is going to be the damned headache. It occurs to me that I may just be looking at an individual so pathetic, petty, mentally anguished, mad, and direly unfit for anything resembling national leadership that the words to properly describe the magnitude of my disappointment of this woman...nay, this womanchild, utterly fail me. I am gazing upon the profile of a paranoid, vain, vengeful, screaming drunkard and brute that has apparently singlehandedly destroyed democracy in her home country, sown all manner of chaos throughout her continent, and viciously campaigns against anything resembling a political opponent all while espousing the need for openness and equality. Comically brutal against dissidents to the point of encouraging chemical weaponry against dissidents and local enemies, and yet a spineless little coward who shies away from actual conflict in the face of the Great Powers who would crush her underfoot if they bothered to take notice of her vile antics."

"I feel like I am reading the subject of parody, or some terribly foolish joke. But I find myself incapable of laughter. Or even concern. Reading this sugary, jovial bloody article fills me with something as close to simmering rage that I have felt in a very long time. This is written like I'm reading a damned comedy, and that more than anything else is what's fueling the headache at this very moment."

"...And to top it all off, whichever one of the savages that compiled this article in whatever God-forsaken country my subject is from couldn't even be bothered to find a proper picture of the girl. Instead I'm assaulted with the casual pose of an aspiring genocidal maniac in bed wear. I'm putting this in the furnace, getting tea, and returning to a far less irritating reality."

Ok who do I have to give my opinion on now? Tharanis Naerinim the 2nd? Liberal socialist? Emperor? I'm not familiar with human ideologies, but aren't emperors supposed to be the opposite of that, because the only emperors I know are from the Empire of Stars and they all are the opposite of what you would describe as "liberal socialist." Unless you are one of these "emperors" that has absolutely no power. I'm also reading here that you fought in a civil war that was caused because the previous leader wasn't very competent? Then you took over? So you took an anti-war agenda, which might be good actually. But then you got sick, which caused problems in the government? I thought that you had a ceremonial position. If a system of governance relies so much on one person, then it's probably not that good. I know because I have SOME experience with them. The Followers relies entirely on Zevqir, and it might be better to become more independent from politics if your incapacitated leaves the government dysfunctional.

Constantine Sein Lin Zaw Naing: Well, hello there. You are certainly different and... well, you seem a little tired, for starters. Would you like to sit down, lie down, or something to that effect? No, I am not trying to put you in a vulnerable position, I'm just worried! Anyway, that aside, where are my manners, hehe. I am Valkyrie Valentijn! You must be Second-in-command Relznuq from what I have heard and read about. And well, now I know why you are so tired and on your toes- err, appendages, all the damn time. I'm sorry you had to suffer through all of this, on top of not knowing about your childhood. It must have been hellish to not enjoy the innocent years. With that said, I will ask something out of you, no strings attached. How would you like to go out with me and Clarissa tomorrow? Again, no strings - I was just wondering if this would put you better at ease and you know, enjoy some time out of your life. Can't be living it all being twitchy with a plasma pistol.

"O-M-G, you're such a Queen! Like sister, you give me good vibes to the people who are in a dark place and that's like very respectable. However, don't listen to the bitches, Queen, it's not egotistical to name a country after yourself because that's like spreading good vibes to yourself and self-care, know what I'm preaching? Don't let them put down another Queen. So like, sister, you saved the world and all that? So why not just be content as a girlboss and do what you want like they owe you as the savior of the world which means that you're entitled to be girlboss of the world. Does it matter if you make a few mistakes here and there, sister, because I know you gonna rise up and go all Godzilla on these bitches."

"Kween Josephine. Unfit for rule that much is certain, but what else to comment on? She is clearly some form of mentally deranged or handicapped, yet is still a leader, how exactly she not only rose to power but kept it is beyond my understanding of humanity. She is perhaps one of the single worst leaders I have ever seen, well, that's not entirely true, I have seen worse. One of the worst Human leaders I've ever seen. If she even actually is human, it's not entirely obvious to me with this form changing ability she seems to have. Regardless, an extremely unfit and borderline insane leader, I would recommend her removal as soon as possible, prepare a scapegoat."

Amadeus Freidrich: "From what i have heard (read and said as 'read'), you [Azavir] seem to be created in a similar fashion of the lore of the Nintendo game 'Xenoblade Chronicles,' but have developed a will of your own, which I applaud you for. The reason why I was reminded of Xenoblade is because of the Bionis and Mechonis, with Bionis requiring living essence to survive, and Mechonis eventually trying to starve Bionis, for a crazy reason. This I found similar to the feud between Mir, the god of order (and, by association, the Khuraki) to kill all life to starve and kill Dagot, the dark god. Now that I think about it, Halo's Flood and Precursor race, which I have forgotten the name of, would also fit into this category.

I must applaud you again for gaining free will, but must ask about the Ha'Hosh, as are they slaves, or are they free-willed, as you are?"

Tapping Into
the Neural Network...

(Sadly have to ignore 90% of it because that's all info Azavir itself is not privy to but I can have it answer the question)

“I know not of what games you speak of, but the Ha’Hosh are no more slaves than human soldiers are. They have a duty to fulfill, and they get it done regardless of orders. They are influenced by me, and while I’ve never had one tell me no directly, they have a mind of their own of course. They are bound to me, but they are not mindless drones or ants, calling what we have a ‘hivemind’ is merely a simple way of putting it to help others understand the concept of our Neural Link.”

"Oh ho ho! A progressive emperor who doesn't like war! Excuse me while I mark that off on my sheet of cryptid bingo, it is right between modern plesiosaurs and overly-large-footed hominids. You'll have to forgive me, but you seem quite the pushover. I can understand that you've experienced some degree of trauma due to your military experience, but among our kind facing our fears is a rite of passage. After all, doing needful things even with your fears shrieking in your ears is a true mark of courage. You shy from conflict, yet you embrace argument. This tells me that you savor the taste of victory, but cannot countenance the idea of being hurt in the process.

Godulan Puppet #2, RPing as technologically advanced tribal society founded by mongols and vikings (and later with multiple other Asian and Native American cultures) motivated by an intrinsic devotion to the spirit of competition. They'll walk softly, talk softly, and make soothing noises as they stab you in the back and take your stuff... unless you're another Caleshan, whereupon they'll only stab you in the back figuratively!

"I do find this a curious case indeed; clever, most certainly, though from what I gather, not trained classically, no... I do not think first of bloodlust in some general categorisation of responsibility: a tendency towards violence as a manner of justice marks one as truly below he par, and relying upon succession by combat for power is to put their strategic abilities into question. Not mentioning a declaration encouraging a 92-year-old man to 'face his fears' with the military..."
