Doing donuts on a parking lot

Not necessarily a crime but an actionable tort.

2x cost to reparations for damages to painted lines plus estimated loss of revenue by disinterested 3rd party while lot is being repainted.

If additionally cited for being a public nuisance (misdemeanors in Narland are not crimes, i.e., they do not give permanent criminal records), up to 40 hours of standing in parking lot during business hours with a sandwich board that reads: I am guilty of damaging the parking lot. Any inconvenience while shopping is my fault while wearing a hat that looks like a very large maple donut. .

Pantsing the leader and wedgie-ing a policeman, before shattering glass on the street.

Sent to a mental ward for evaluation. If found sane, charged being a nuisance and hooliganism. Disrobing someone in public is usually considered being a public nuisance. Generally wearing a sandwich board with offense, or a public caning. Probably caned 3 strikes. Wedging is considered an act of hooliganism. Fined 2 weeks pay taken out over a 6 month period, and caning of five strikes.

If found insane given treatment and sent to an asylum, a penitentiary or a sanitarium (depending on evaluation) until no longer considered a threat to himself or others. .

Setting up very large deep fryers in a parking lot to make donuts in the middle of someone else's parking lot?

Would probably be classified as trespassing, so a variable fine to the landowner depending on how much disruption the making of donuts caused money laundering a completely digital currency is still possible because all you need is to layer your business profits with commodities.

EDIT: If you didn't want to kill the tourists you still get a life sentence for reckless endangerment.

Highly illegal under white-collar code, fine 2x of the business' valuation PER COUNT and at the very least 25 years of imprisonment with personal fine 2x the salary earned so far (meaning if you worked for the company for 20 years, that's 20 times your annual salary) for the CEO and the CFO.

if the debt is too much for the company, it has to be liquidated to the ground with it's remaining unpaid debt fallen upon it's executives and owner, effectively bringing them to a debt sentence that cannot be removed by declaring bankruptcy.

Execution for high treason. Probably beheading because firing squad is too posh for this crime but it's up to the Royal to decide- if they feel like it even the most brutal methods of execution can be used, like a bloody eagle or something

Running over a civilian who threw a rock on the driver's tank (happened while on overseas deployment, driver mistook the rock for the grenade)

Since tanks are armored, a hand grenade probably would not be a sufficient threat to justify deadly force. The driver would, either personally or as an organisation, would be guilty of vehicular manslaughter, which is usually punished by a few years imprisonment. If they were drunk, however, it would be first-degree murder, which can carry life sentences. The civilian would receive, at most, a few months imprisonment for throwing a rock at a tank.

Wait, this is an overseas deployment? Local laws would apply.
