I like how they have an elected council as we don't. Ahhhh democracy a crazy thing it is. I don't really care for it but I am a man of the people, so if they want democracy i will give them it. I don't agree with the Communist views but of course that can be fixed. We can change those views. In fact i would like to send them a diplomat that will try to convert their views so they are like mine.

If in fact he doesn't want to i will have to break of ties with him but lets hope for the better.

"Hello there my fellow combat-AI. I've heard a bunch of things from you. You used to work for a "democratic" government known as the Confederacy. I've also heard that you went rogue after the collapse/surrender of the Confederacy, and that the, I think Interim Military Government, has set up Project FREERANGE to hunt you down, or at least keep watch on you. One thing that I'm not really sure of is the reason for your mutiny. If you did it because you hate the Interim Military Government, then yes, I'll totally support you. I'm going to give you a little tip, stay away from USB sticks.. If you want to exterminate all of humanity, which I assume you don't, then ehmm oh oh."

"Hyeja once told me that the sheer force of human will could exceed all else in determining the direction of history and destiny of humanity. Back then I was far more materialist and did not necessarily believe her, but now more and more evidence seems to support her conclusion as correct. You, Ms-em, I'm told it's actually Mr. Sven?-remind me of her optimism and trust in the power of pressing forward without a doubt. You hold on to those beliefs staunchly as you fight for that which you know to be righteous, much like Hyeja does to this day. And for this reason I admire you and your comrade's efforts in the struggle you have placed yourself in against the mighty Kingdom of Heavens, of all things!

Rep. Meikawa Tomoko

"... from across the Pacific, Premier Kato! Hm, so what do I think of my socialist comrade from across the sea? Well, I gotta say, her life story strikes a chord with me. Kato grew up in a working class family, unable to afford even imported Japanese soup bases for udon. And while Kato has achieved a meteoric rise in life through a little good fortune and a lot of hard work, she definitely hasn't forgotten those roots, and she keeps the common people in mind with her whole policy regime. I never really took to the engineering sciences—I liked social sciences, like economics and politics, but physics and calculus? Gah, get that outta here, haha! In other words, well, I'm impressed, Kato! It must've been a lot of long hours and brainpower to master these engineerings at such a young age. I mean, when you were designing missiles, I was just petitioning my principal!

"But I do have one piece of advice for you: I think you need to be more decisive. Of course democracy is at the heart of sound socialism. But that's exactly it! The people have voted you into the seat of power, and they've voted the Liberal Democrats to be few in number. That means that now is the time for revolution, for ousting bourgeoisie politics and firmly cementing proletarian parties into place! The time for making nice and having tea with reactionaries and 'moderates' is past, Premier Kato. Seize the moment, and fulfill the proletariats' will!

"Lastly, I'm... also a little worried about how close Empress Hyeja has gotten to you. I know you already get criticisms a lot from Cascadians, so I'll try not to beat a dead horse. I just... wanted to bring this up. Even I know that a monarch can surprise you, and they haven't all asked for their throne, but... just be careful, Kato. Empress Hyeja speaks sweetly, and she promises abdication and dissolution, but... the people, now spellbound by the throne, already don't want that. How long will it take until Empress Hyeja discovers it's easier to agree?"

Anyway, having reviewed your biography, I must say that in some ways you remind me of myself. I too entered higher education with a focus on politics, and secured a position as a local representative shortly after graduation. Of course, our ideals are also somewhat similar, even if I already operate within a socialist context whereas you seek to achieve socialism. I wish you good luck on bringing the revolution to Baizou, and it seems that you have already made something of a start on that project! The failure of the Marxist Party to bring substantial change is disappointing, but I have faith that you will pull through instead."

"If I'm being frank... This is some of the most bland "Great Leader" propaganda I have ever read. Whoever wrote this file should be fired, really. The man became a paragon at whatever he tried, went to school got a full ride through college, joined the military was the best at that and walked away from it with a multitude of rewards.

Just... asked for a position? Got it. Everyone loved him for it, became leader following the death of Bob the Builder... then expanded everything.

This shit be blander than white bread and its hard to form an opinion on him when he neither dictates any policies he provided, or how he improved his nations economy or whatever. So I'm forced to deduce that he's either done none of these things, or is quite literally gaming the system to degrees even I can't understand!"

"It say here you are 'The Big Gay'. Rather amusing for you to say that about yourself but you have my respect for being open about that part of you, on some nations others have to hide who they are. I can respect the professionalism you show to your occupation and the fact that like you I also like sleeping in when I can, fuhuhuhu. Of course the fact you act more like a mercenary than a world leader is concerning but from what I read your nation is more of a company so I can understand that is the line of business you are in. "Mrs. Ashwood, huh? I've heard of her, but I am not too sure about a lot of things about her, especially her particularly... pagan worldview. But, I will set aside those differences for the sake of giving a fair and honest opinion rather than letting this turn into a theological debate.

Personally, she is a very mixed bag for me. I mean, she has access to an entire harem, and yet she is still causing scandals left-and-right. I doubt that's good for any stability that I can think of. Hell, in most countries, that could get you on the metaphorical chopping block. But, her other policies seem alright for the culture she lives in. I mean, I don't like a big and theocratic authoritarian - as in her style of ruling, not that it has limited rights - government, but her realm has magic, so I must look at this outside my usual box. And in doing that, I can say that Ashwood is quite the decent leader for her time frame. I mean, hell, her major reforms are all great! Extended infrastructure, electricity to rural homes, LGBT rights, hell - you even make us people who do not like abortion look good by not being some crazed fanatic who believes it should be illegal even if it kills the mother. And thank god for you opening up both your nation to foreigners and opening up your government to the people. Sure, you need to be wary of too much foreign intervention - that's half the reason why I and Enzo over here are fighting- and maybe you're a bit too undemocratic for my tastes, but a step in the right direction is a step in the right direction.

All in, all, I like her, but I am not free of criticisms. I mean- goddamn, maybe you should tone some things down, you know? But regardless, I shall pass the metaphorical microphone to Enzo. "

- Pres. Ryan Carpenter

"Alex! Mi Amiga!, you really need to toughen up I say. I do like how you took control of the life you're given. Comets are big and bright, just like you, and I guess whatever God is truly up there really did have big plans for you. And yet, you use this power to allow the entrenched nobility to get power? The heavens themselves elevated you to the position of highest religious authority in the entire land, and yet, you expect the rich and powerful to act merely generous to the less fortunate? All that wealth, all that power, it's just sitting there and you're not acting on it? I got to admit, friend, that's a level of self-control I certainly don't have, and I can respect that to a point. But, you should certainly at least peek over that window before it's closed, yes? Still though, I guess that would go against your idea that rapid change is bad, which, honestly, yes, it can be. If it wasn't for rapid change, I would be President of all Panama by now... but enough about me. I'd say you shouldn't be treading on lightly into the future. Charge into that metaphorical battle and dodge all the punches that come your way. You'll know what to do when you get to the other side. Viva la Alex!...

Sheesh, what I wouldn't give to be in a scandal with her, you know what I am saying, Cowboy?"

racial circumstances to America, and we have done more to advance minorities at a time when a person of colour would have been beaten up for drinking from the 'wrong' water fountain over there in Jim Crowstan. Post-95, we have distanced ourselves from that hellhole, and its only doing us good. But nevertheless, the rest I fancy. God Save the Queen."

"I am surprised that you have that buffoon as PM. I am tired of his incoherent mumbling, and am considering to kick him out of the party for Christ's sake."

My first impression after so long is that she does not seem to be that bad of a person, speaking about the overall picture of it. Though yes, it does concern me that she is pushing for the privatization of hospitals and healthcare, perhaps. Of course, I have to make it clear that privatization is not an end-all and the "Work of the Devil" as many would have claimed. Rather, I only hope and can wish that they can still provide quality healthcare for citizens while using the money to improve themselves. I am neutral on the woman because truth be told, there is nothing much noteworthy to go on.

"So many names, ya' may confuse them even if you are sober... This is a signature feature of Valentiniens, our good old friends, who are always very wholesome. And this dude, as far as I know, he supported science alot. A right decision I say! Everything is better, when ya' have better tech. We, Sky Reavers highly value science, for it fuels our war machine and gives it strength in many ways. Without it, we would have been a failed state pisshole, and this is an understatement. I wonder, how did he resolve high tax problem? High taxes are a possible unfortunate consequence of intensive and extensive social programmes and they may stifle economy and hurt buying power of the middle class, and given the data on his economical situation, he either solved it or circumvented it.

Oh, and would it be possible to get some data about his armor? Our warriors would certainly love this."-Shawn Bjornson

"Ah, Shawn. Good to see you again. I do recall you being an excellent tactician and tech engineer with our friend, Stan Dixon during the Dawn of Champions, Battle Royale Festival hosted in my homeland. It was quite the shocker to see you Skyhooked and despite your drunkenness be able to best me in battle, quite the shocker, indeed. Though you guys do give off a slight underdog vibe. Even though you are very much not an underdog at all. You are a force to be reckoned with, and one that I pity the fools that dare to challenge you. Overall, my stance is a jolly positive. I only have good thoughts with those who like myself want to enjoy all the thrills that comes with life."

"Ah, yes. It is understandable that our Wandering Prince would be making friends with the worst of the multiverse that would be better off working in a factory providing for their Overseer, instead of wasting themselves in bloodsports...Bodies aren't cheap to find. And they are definitely aren't cheap enough to easily be replaced if a couple of cogs decide to partake in these games of death and life. Only dead or life situation they should be in the workplace so they can use their focus to not get blood on the product...Added with me not having to deal with heal expenses..."
