That's my favorite song by them too. They're earlier work is a lot heavier, but I like their new stuff better. They went from black/viking metal to a sort of psychedelic sounding post-metal (like Fjara)

Solstafir - "Fjara"

I checked Wikipedia (which is obviously not always accurate), and it said they were viking, black, and post-metal. I don't even know what viking metal is. This album said it was experimental metal and post-rock, which I can definitely hear the post-rock influence. Have you heard much post-rock? Post-rock can be pretty sweet, and usually instrumental.

Solstafir-Sjúki Skugginn

Edit: And I'm usually more into this type of metal over the lot heavier stuff, so I'm definitely more likely to appreciate their new album over the other stuff. They only have their new album on Spotify. I like how all the Icelandic bands seem to be on Spotify, while I rarely see anything Japanese on there. But, I definitely like some "Black metal", like some of Triptykon's stuff.

The complete discography of Sigh (a Japanese metal band) is on Spotify, but that's pretty much all of the Japanese music I listen to. Along with some Boris.

Viking Metal is sort of like a fusion of black metal and folk metal. It is characterized by its relatively slow pace, use of keyboards and synth, dark imagery, and almost always lyrical themes of Norse mythology.

First viking metal band
Modern viking metal

I don't think you'll like any of the modern viking metal. You might like the Bathory ones though.

Sigh are so great.

The only Boris albums are the new ones though I think - they suck.

Sun of Nothing, Between The Buried And Me.

we, unlike the bourgeoisie, have nothing to lose and therefore our expression will be the only honest one, our words will be the only challenging ones and our art will be the one revolutionary expression. We need new noise and new voices and new canvases to become something more than the last poets of a useless generation.
