I haven't made one because 1) I don't want to share personal opinions on the Internet; 2) They're probably easily inferred based on what I've said and how my nation is (to an extent); 3) I don't want to end up utilizing buzzwords; 4) I'm too lazy to make the dispatch.

Honestly, I don't understand why people have to make their positions apparent on every single tiny issue. Just say what you think when the matter presents itself. More importantly why do you need a pro and an anti list when it stands to reason that your antis are whatever opposes your pros?

Alternatively, why do you even need a pro-anti list to begin with (in sigs anyway)?

On a slightly related note, here's another one - leaders in MT liberal democracies with "legalising gay marriage" somewhere in their portfolio, with bonus points if a) they're military interventionists (slayyyy kween, dropping Daddies of All Bombs on backwards savages and their repressive regimes), and/or b) they wave it around in people's faces whenever they're criticised in-character. Most of the time there's hardly any context for it either, it's just dropped in somewhere in their political career as if they have some kind of civil rights checklist that they're going through. I say slightly related because most of the time these leaders are just vessels for the author's ideology and have the exact same kind of pro-anti list with Pro: [good freedom reasonable things 😊] and Anti: [evil fascist racist communist 😡].

TBH I think having your politics right there in your sig is useful for determining if I wanna interact with you in any way.

Like I'm trans and lesbian (and also ace but while acephobia is a thing, I haven't seen anyone put asexuals in their anti shit) and if you have shit like 'the LGBT agenda' or some other LGBTphobic crap in your 'anti'? To the ignore list with you bitch.

Honestly, seeing that and seeing somebody that CLEARLY differs in opinion from mine kinda makes me not want to talk to them. It's not impossible to make friends that have opposite opinions (I live in Kentucky, I would know), but it's hard to warm up to them because you know it might end up in an argument or two people being unhappy in any other way.

Unlike Aiko, I'd rather know somebody's opinions after I've gotten to know them so it doesn't get in the way of initial interactions.

Silly, don't you know that there is literally only one type of socialism (command economy under an authoritarian dictatorship) and every single socialist subscribes to this exact same view on socialism and that's why the political left has always been so harmonious throughout its history?

I reserve my sig for cute messages, my worldbuilding stuff, and some counters. ^^

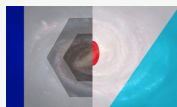

I don't even go that political anyway. Even if I do, I'm generally fine with someone unless they have views that are absolutely absurd, or are extreme.

It's funny because my sig probably is a non-offender with a novel, or a Wiki entry. I have neither in my sig, so you must dig through my Factbooks, as Fate intended.

I use my sig to SIGnify what kind of nation this is. Yes it uses the trope of stupidly long leftist ideology names, but I use it as a quick and easy way to give people a clear picture of the type of nation I am.
