if injured, you pay him a fine. If paralyzed or killed, 7-20 years in jail depending on the circumstances; you are unlikely to get more than 10 years if it wasnt a case of DUI.

No punishment. Mercenaries are encouraged, as long as they pledge full loyalty to the Boer Cape Republic. If not, there is not an official punishment, but they'll probably be tortured and/or executed.

Being in possession of illegal goods?

In my opinion, all NS stats are canon except for economy and military. I believe nations can make those up themselves.

MILITARY: Military isn't really fleshed out, so I believe users can decide what their military is like proportionate to their country's population + defence budget.
ECONOMY: Because of my currency being worth US$0.005, if I recognised economy as canon I would have a GDP of less than US$700 million. I know a lot of other users use low-value currencies, so I do not take economy as canon and just estimate what it would be based on lore, population and policies.

Depends on the item. Nuclear bombs could get you death sentence, other more minor things could be a tiny fine or even just a warning.

Slavery is illegal in Khoa Dien Dao, and possession of slave labor is one of the few crimes still punishable by death. All slaves within KDD territory are automatically emancipated, regardless of origin.

Ninja'd

Assaulting minors is a significant crime, punishable with fixed term imprisonment of up to 15 years per offence. If such assault results in death, the crime is upgraded to murder and is punishable with life imprisonment (or death with reprieve, which is a punishment unique to Khoa Dien criminal law).

Polygamy -- 5 years hard labor per fraudulent marriage, financial restitution to defrauded parties at par with time defrauded -- usually $50,000 American per year per party. All but first marriage annulled unless that marriage itself was fraudulent. Time and fines may be ameliorated do to extenuating circumstance. If spouse of polygamist found to aid and abet in the polygamy, spouse may (but not always receive 1-5 years hard labor).

Depends. If they are human then they should get occupied for a little while with some mass surveillance to make sure that the citizens stay safe but we don't really like attacking humans. If the nation is run by something other than humans (not counting normal animals since they can't run a nation) then those grown beasts shall be slain and any of it's spawn under the age of 5 shall be taken to the White Desert Purification Center for re-education and testing forever.

That counts as execution. However, in the Middle and Eastern Archipelagos, it counts as 5 years for attempted murder. The Western Archipelago is a bit more terrifying, however, you're safe since it only happens 3 times and it will never happen again.

Warning: Please advise if you are a fearless hero. If you are, click the spoiler below.
