This song has nice lyrics....

Show Spoiler

My dad says there's a lot of symbolism in this song. What I get out of it is like human greed. Specifically with the first part being about, I dunno, greedy politicians, rich people, corporations? Add on top of that human destruction, and humans enslaving each other. Then we're sucking all of our resources dry because of our endless greed and want for expanding and more power, for "progress", even if we're slowly killing ourselves off even if we don't want to admit it.

Something like that anyway.

Sleepytime Gorilla Museum-What Shall We Do Without Us?

And this song title makes me think of the world without human beings.

Yes, there should be. I know a lot of lyrics are meant to have multiple interpretations so it could be entertaining.

I forgot the part at the end of "The Creature" that was "I guess I must really be some kind of idiot hillbilly"

And that song name made me think of The Hunger Games movie. But it also made me think of world hunger.

And AGH MY SPOTIFY ADVERTISEMENTS WORK AGAIN AND THE FIRST ONE I GET IS THE CONDOM ONE

The neighbors "Next door" doing about as much fireworks tonight as they did on 4th of July (And noisemakers throughout the day at random to scare the crap out of us, apparently), while everyone else is rather quiet (Multiple people launched fireworks off yesterday, too, to a lesser extent). Must be when most of their people come over or something.

I don't know how these people live in tiny little houses but have all this money to launch off so much fireworks
