The current Aikolander currency is the Aikolandais franc which was made the official currency after the failure of the previous one in a period of financial crisis in 1838.

also, they're completely honest about corporate backing winning elections, which... is better?

Don't worry, they don't have any dysphoria. Feminization changes both sex and gender, so they are perfectly fine.

The South left the Union in 2039 due to election issues and cultural friction. However, unlike the Confederacy of the 19th Century, the Confederacy of the 21st Century isn't concerned about "domestic institutions" (aka slavery)

The wheel is Good, Cheap or Fast. You can only pick 2. So if you'll stay with me for some conjecture, the maintenance fees of her Valkyries must be particularly high, which means they have to charge an arm a leg and maybe a testicle to hire. Which means their clientele can probably be broken down to a few organizations if you ever get them knocking on your door."

basically yes, though 7500 people including maintenance techs over a significant portion of the upper reach is as i should point out exceedingly tiny and so there's a good deal of budget cutting and downsizing involved. her reputation attracts business, her forces use so much surplus it's not even funny (pcv anzio, for instance, is a fucking salvaged cruiser), and van heerden intentionally floods her with guns because he trusts her in a really weird "you're based and also on the haha-funny rejuvenative drugs, so here have my shit" sense. essentially she got lucky; her business spiked with the war, she sniped a hell of a lot of ex-confederacy vets (cheri keller was the anzio's captain during '87, for instance) and she managed to not fuck up afterwards, and she's been riding the wave of success ever since. of course, none of that is written because i'm clinically lazy, but hey.

it should also be noted that that factbook is a serious over-exaggeration of their capabilities intended as a sales pitch, though the ic format doesn't really convey that well imo.

Their ships are programmed with certain personalities and moods in mind, with Armageddon-Class Battleships for example being programmed to be amgery (is it just me, or could this sorta programming be what caused that tens of thousands death toll accident back in the day, since almost all of the handling of the ships are AI-managed?). I guess this leads to the question of what sorta mood the more peaceful ships have.

The Iltu State is alike to the UK, with a monarch ruling over a thalassocratic imperium, which itself possesses an internal democratic, parliamentary framework. Internally, the State is torn between the monarch's absolutist and traditionalist mode of governance, and the growing popularity of secularism and democratic rule.

Although, it may not state it directly and often gets lost due to it's meme ideology overshadowing it. The Confederacy's technological level is light years ahead compared to most of their foreign detractors and this means while PC doesn't really seem to have a proper military, it could always just strap a hyperdrive to a asteroid and hyperspeed ram it against an offending enemy planet or fleet.

Despite sounding ridiculously compact at over 172,000 persons per square kilometre and more than twice the population of Japan in one metropolis, their capital city's density is actually only 1.7 times that of Manila.

The situation in North America -and to an extent, the whole of the world- is wild. The western American coast is mostly controlled by two socialist countries -the DemSoc Cascadia and the Maoist? California. who are wholly opposed to the "Northern Federation", a rump state in the Eastern and Central US which follows a plutocratic socio-economic system. A fascist Dixie and a neoliberal monarchist Mexican Empire also exist.

The islands that make up the Caribbean Confederation were largely founded during the Archaic Age of 3500 to 3000 BCE, with the exception of Trinidad, which was first settled around 2 to 3 millenia earlier.

China unified much moore earlier than it should've, as it started in 1938, and then that marked the start of an era of mass prosperity under communism after China's reunification.

That, somehow, someone will always find a way to make the Nazis even worse. Also, it seems as if those worshipping Hitler don't actually know what he looks like, as an image of him is ironically attributed instead to an "unattributed preacher".
