I mean, we can actually create a mathematical definition for evolution in terms of the evolutionary algorithm and then write code to deal with abstract instances of evolution, which basically equates to mathematical proof that evolution works. All that remains is to show that biological systems replicate in such a way as to satisfy the minimal criteria required for evolution to apply to them, something which has already been adequately shown time and again. At this point, we've pretty much proven that not only can evolution happen, it pretty much must happen since it's basically impossible to prevent it from happening.

Huh, this is surpassing my expectations. I've liked Solstafir, but I've always been kinda on the fence about them in some ways (vocals, though I like the vocals. If being on the fence about them and liking them at the same time makes sense), and I also feel like their music was headed into a direction that could turn into something bland pretty easily, despite liking it. In other words, turning too post-rock, which a fair amount of bands do and become one of the boring bands among the genre. While I was correct that, yes, they went post-rock, or at least a lot more so, it's turning out to be more enjoyable than I first expected.
