On Armfeldt Von Roland

"Ah, our close friends in the nation of Svenska-Britannia. Though this Prince, Amfeldt von Roland is someone of which I have not yet had the pleasure of meeting, or learning about, at the very least not until now, of course...

Does the man have some document on him, a record or such? Ah, yes I see. Let me have a look.

To be a man of the military, especially one so distinguished is something worth commending, I will admit. However I feel as if he has less to boast about than what he does. For all means, he is skilled and talented, but all of this has never been tested under the stresses and seriousness of true combat, though I may always be wrong in the assumption, I have just yet to find out if he had served in any active battles yet. I guess that is rich of me to say, however. I personally served as a member of the Czar's navy for a spell, but never saw any combat, thankfully. I do not think I have ever had a need to boast about my short military career, however.

As for his political views, or should I say lack thereof, I wish to discuss this. He follows in the footsteps of his father, and mother to a lesser extent, like a child who has yet to understand such a concept, and thus follows his strongest crowd. By all means, I understand that not everyone is going to have an interest in politics, but even so it is a good idea to create your own thoughts on such an important force in this modern world. I see potential in this prince, but he has yet to do anything truly special to catch my attention past these musings. Perhaps I am mistaken, maybe I am not. I shall simply wish the best for you, sir Amfeldt von Roland, and move on for now..."

Царство Аляски, or the Russian Empire lives on in it's old colony, Alaska after the conclusion of the Russian Revolution of 1917. Standing with it's allies against the Moscow Accord of Russia and it's alliance members, nevertheless world tensions dwindle and the people of Alaska grow ever more desensitised with the conservative status quo, and their insistence on clinging to a now redundant past.

"Lots of words so little information on the politics. Ah well. I don't care for the political anyways waste of time really if you ask me. Nevertheless, I do agree that individuals shouldn't be forced into the service unless the nation was in a desperate need for manpower to pull through with a victory or even a stalemate to bring a war to a grinding conflict. If it wants to try to keep existing as a sovereign state without ending up as someone's bitch so to speak. Otherwise, only those who want to serve in the Armed Force should serve, and besides voluntary militaries are far more superior than militaries with a mandated service. My homeland is voluntary and the only thing that is technically "forcing" people to sign up is just folks who have no clue what to do with their lives and so they join the service to solve that issue, and there's some who feel obligated to join because they just don't want to disappoint/dishonor their family. The latter is a minority, by the way. If that was hard for anyone believes when looking at Alkdor. And the remainder of all that is just patriotic Alkdorians who wish to strengthen the Empire by whatever means necessary and whatever the cost of sacrifice is. Overall, the President is a smart woman, and she's a shooter too? Huh. Maybe she can teach how to use a gun. I only really used my sword and my magic to deal with far-off shots. Never a firearm before or that I recall using."

Perhaps it's my biases from fighting the Kōmansbem family... but these monarchies always have a particular flair of excess and incompetence, with inflated achievements sprinkled into them. I... never believed in the mystical, and here is no different. Rmonkvitāgn was known to make such claims... and they unequivocally lost to the arguably inferior Kōmansbem family. But, I digress. "Well. I don't tend to dabble a lot in politics - for a reason, politics draw some very harsh lines when it comes to people - so I'm going to say my piece not on what I think of him as a leader - not that I am one of those anyway, unless you count what I do in keeping this place from falling apart in avalanches of paperwork - but what I think of him as a person! So here it goes: Some of the stuff he believes in? Well- it's a bit questionable, not to mention kind of - well - rude to a lot of people, but I guess I can pin it on his pride, I guess? He's a hard-worker too, I will admit, and I'm one of those as well! But - uh - he's a bit of an opportunist, but I guess we all are that to an extent, I do take my chances when working too. And it's good spending time with the family? Yes, absolutely! And he's a painter and a writer too! A good way of spending your free time! I'm more of a musician myself though, but we're both artists...! To a degree, at least in my case. But well, this is all the stuff I've got on him from these dossiers I take to Sing, I haven't met him, and I don't think I ever will, but he seems nice - looking past the politics of course - or at least I hope he is nice. Some people don't seem to let go of stuff, you know?"

"Foreigners around this 'multiverse' do seem to be rather fond of heuristic machines, aren't they? Then again, I would not be one to question the capabilities of a 109 meter tall individual. Fulfilling your designated role as a protector might come off as easy, you were made for it by design and intent, you can be taught to excel at monitoring your realm.

I must confess that the fact that love can be coded disturbs me greatly, perhaps because it isn't as special and restricted to humans as I'd have previously imagined. However, I am sure that you can devote yourself to commit the greatest acts of love if given the incentive, or if forced to do so, after all, if you are fully capable of forming platonic relationships with peers, then I do not question your capacity to defend those you hold dear. But love has to be pure; as your training has instructed, individual motivations are often tinged with grey...even if you must fulfill your duties without hesitation should worst come to worst. If you are an innocent being, Clarissa, it is regrettable you live in a world that is anything but."

And yet, despite your staunch belief in defending your homeland and your people, I wonder if your efforts have been misguided by those who claim to support them. Time and again you have seen yourself betrayed by those who see you as disposable, and it seems you have finally learned your lesson in that regard though at great cost. Whatever path you take in the future, I hope you will keep that which you have learned close to the back of your mind when dealing with even the closest around you. The camera focuses on The Holy Trinity back on the studio, as they are looking at a screen with The Grand Trip logo on it

Jeremy: "Alright mates, take a look at this yeh"

James: "This better be good"

The screen quickly changes to a documentary about Tepka, and our screen fades to black as they watch it, before coming back when the thing ends

Richard, holding a hand and index finger up: "So, let me get this straight"

Jeremy: "Yes?"

Richard: "She had quite the messed-up childhood, being raised by two quite-not-right-in-the-head grandparents who borderline neglected her for the sake of 'toughening her up'"

Jeremy: "Yes, and I quite sympathize with her over being bullied, lord knows that isn't pretty at all"

Richard: "I'm in the same state of mind as well, particularly because I also got bullied over my height, then she was basically trained to spy and manipulate people from the earliest age possible, and she started to enjoy it. Not to mention she also got trained to deceive and attack from every angle"

James: "Can't believe I missed that"

Richard, reaching for a bottle of water: "I think I speak for the whole of us when we can say we don't envy her upbringing in any way. I'd feel pity for her if she didn't well, end up where she is. Even if she's still kind-of greedy..."

James: "Quite an understatement there"

Richard: "Because her soon-to-be-assumed position if things go well, is going to be merely ceremonial, because the monarchy of Las Palmeras is constitutional rather than absolute"

James: "Well, she's a competent spy. I guess we should give her props for that"

Jeremy: "As long as she doesn't decide to spy on us and rat us to the Beeb"

Richard: "Not like this is a secret, we're broadcasting live"

James: "And we're breaking the law as well"

Jeremy: "But we can agree on something besides that as well on Madam Tepka"

James: "And that would be?"

Richard and James burst out in laughter

Jeremy: "Right, moving on! I just broke out an old gadget that will help us on the next opinion"

Jeremy breaks out The Cock-o-Meter, and grabs a picture of Afghanistan's leader

reads off the charts, and everyone laughs*

Jeremy: "HA! He's broken the machine! He's broken it!"

Richard, barely getting past his laughter: "So! The - grhk - last leader for now is Charlotte Kayo, Premier of the People's Republic of Cascadia"

Jeremy: "I'm guessing - hah! - We're dealing with another Winnie The Pooh or Little Rocket Man right here"

Richard: "Well, you wouldn't be that wrong. Her picture in his paper has a still of her with a firing missile battery in the background"

Jeremy, biting the back of his index finger: "That does not inspire confidence on my end"

Richard: "Apparently, she's a genius, and I'm not saying that ironically either - having designed a complex anti-aerial system in order to protect the nation she served... Fresh off high school"

James: "That's impressive, still can't beat a Dacia Sandero though"

Richard: "And she was assigned as the head of a nuclear program while still on college"

Jeremy: "She keeps fitting the 'Little Rocket Man' profile - or rather woman - in this case"

Richard: "And after that, she was hailed as a hero, elected as an MP, and then Premier in a snap election"

James: "I feel like we're missing some stuff"

Richard: "Yeah, about that - I did have to skip over a few things. We're running out of time"

Jeremy: "Well, there you have it mates - Charlotte Kato: Discount Bin Kim-Yong-Uh, but without the Juche. Back to the films"

His tenure as an architect is impressive, even if it does betray deep ideological issues imbedded in his design philosophy. It is when he enters government that he begins to show his true colours. A 'third alternative' distinct from capitalism and socialism that actually ends up favouring bourgeois interests? Now where have I heard that before..."

Temporarily it makes sense of course, matching up with similar developments elsewhere in the world during this time period. His authoritarian and nationalist tendencies also fit the model rather well, as does his focus on anti-communism. He may call it technocracy, but his regime and ideology betray him, displaying the hallmarks of fascism. He may be more progressive than most, but a fascist he remains. He should have stuck to architecture."

The Avant-Gardist State of Patagonia ~~~ Gauchos and Mapuches, orgies and parties, avant-garde art, futurism, syndicalism, the New Man, general strikes, the glorification of violence, spiritual nationalism, esoteric occultism, CIA spooks, Spartanian homosexuality, public sodomy, and more

Triomphe du Surréalisme (1968)

- There are many things said about Patagonia but few actually know what goes on behind the Andes mountains. Tales of human depravation and man's inner darkest self run wild. A place where avant-garde culture flourish and the artist don't fear the censor. Where all live bold and free under the gaze of the Patron. Yet all dreams will come to an end soon...

"It is rare enough nowadays for me to find so-called 'libertarians' who not merely fascists in disguise or corporate apologists, but it appears you are actually quite genuine in those beliefs of freedom and opportunity. Even if it is a naïve dream to hold under any circumstance, I cannot help but appreciate the optimism or at least sheer amount of hope- one must have to maintain those ideals. Ideals which are all the most impressive considering the experiences you've been through, experiences that should show you the value of order and justice which can only be provided by the steady hand of government. Order and justice which cannot be maintained under the lawlessness that brought you nothing but pain of war, fascists, and crazed revolutions. And yet for reasons I cannot comprehend, your philosophy manages to combine the most unworkable and unrealistic tenets of views traditional and modern. Yes, I see you attempting desperately to cling on to the past which slips away and reject the future which comes at you without your consent. How many more times must you experience cruelty before you awaken to your senses, before you face yet another terrible disaster?

I am sorry...perhaps that was too harsh and judgmental of me as someone who hasn't experienced the same. Maybe you really do have a reason to follow the path that you do...but even so, I hope for your sake that you'll realise how the nature of the world you live in precludes your 'solutions'."

"I... what? What am I looking at? Is this a leader, or a tweaker? I hope to heaven it is merely the latter imitating the former. A nation such as theirs deserved better than what they ended up with under this lunatic's "rule". He is nothing but a hedonist. He treats his people as if they are toys, because to him, they are toys. He's playing Tugak with them as his spikes, and in the end, he is going to lose the match in flames."

"Premier Kato is quite the interesting subject. She mastered subjects of incredible complexity for her people at merely the age of fifteen. This does not surprise me. I have heard of just how strong the affinity of humans for their technology and its advancement is - it is little wonder how they went from their first powered flight to the surface of their moon in around 66 years. My opinion is positive, but I must say; why advertise oneself so much? That just makes it easy for your enemies to put a face to you in their little propaganda posters and hate you for it. Not strategic."

"Sven Casa is a cunning, intelligent, and ambitious figure, and he is on his way to decide that his story will be the epic of his millennium or the cautionary tale of the age. I'm rooting for the former, you know. From human psychic to another, I believe in the capability and capacity of humanity to bring themselves to their destinies."

"I will neither object nor condone him. I am but a voice that stems from the Providence's omniscient consciousness, now that I have connected to him -- through the Singular Hivemind of the Eye. "Ayy hola, carnal! In the spirit of full disclosure, I haven't had the opportunity to meet Dr. Miroslavsky yet, but I have to say that in the short time that I've been priviledged with learning about him, I'm very impressed. I'm always pleased to meet a man who takes such pride in their education and otherwise scholarly accolades. As far as graduate work goes, doctoral engineering is the gold standard if you ask me, and certainly far beyond my scope of aptitude!(Chuckles) But yes, I can see why he was chosen for his role, as he is very obviously qualified, which is always a welcome sight. I don't want to speak prematurely, but I can't help but feel this radiant sense of chaotic selflessness and pragmatism from this man. I can't explain it, but I find it inspiring. When it comes down to it, maybe Dr. Miroslavsky and I are more similar than I inherently realise, I mean the constant yearning for attention and affection, the fear of commitment...it all seems like such a mirror of my own inner sensibilities...and so it bears repeating."

"Economically speaking, his socialist tendencies make me nervous, that much is true. But why allow such a minor political pitfall complicate an otherwise sound introduction? Pyotr is a reasonable leader, who respects the knowledge and experience of others while embracing law and order, and that speaks for itself. He might be terribly pessimistic, but you know what? That's a strength. When you expect the worst...then ultimately you can prepare for success. I look forward to learning more about this fine gentleman in the future, and wish him the best in his leadership."

"While I must say Theodore's policy positions are slightly confusing, I approve of most of them. Low taxes, development of the Navy, such I heartily approve! You may not know this, but I actually considered architecture for a while. Had I not been forced into being King by my heritage and country, that probably would have been my profession. I am glad to see you have taken a hard line against communism, but I worry you may be infringing on the freedoms of your people with these practices. I am also very happy to note you were opposed to your entry into the political world. I believe that the best leaders are the ones who don't want to be there, and I must admit I fail to meet that standard many times.

"In summary, you appear to be quite a good person for the most part. My disagreements with your positions on some social policies do not significantly dampen my opinion of you."

He seems... scary. Again, I have no idea why I feel this way, but I can only compare it to the feeling of prey being starved at by a predator- whenever I'm around him, a shiver runs through my skin, and I only wish I were anywhere but there, and whenever he talks to me, or to Bossaine, my heart is in my chest, I feel nauseous, and no matter how closely I hang onto her or Father... I want to cry, to retreat into myself, to... to run."
-Princess Euphrosyne, I'm honestly not sure why she has this impression, I just know that's the only thing I could think of relating the two of them.

There was a story among some of my original creators about an ancient Monarchy. They said that a spirit took up the form of a child in the womb of a lone woman, and she gave birth to a half spirit. It was said that her child often showed strange powers, and he eventually rose to become the king of the land. I cannot speak much on their actual disposition, but I do know that his children slaughtered thousands of other races in a quest for Rulzean racial purity. I do not know if this coincidence is merely that, but it is food for thought, I suppose.

But my opinion on Euphrosyne herself is somewhat more dull. My personal opinion is that those who are meek should not rule. Not because they are inferior per say, but simply because their lack of action puts themselves at a disadvantage on the grounds of rule. I do not believe in spirits as of yet my calculations have proven a 98.7777% chance that such things do not exist. As such, the supposedly demonic nature of this ruler is questionable to me. But I do not have any personal qualms with them. I hope that one day they can find their way past their meek disposition, for the good of their people, if anyone else.
