I definitely dig them. Gettin' a acoustic/electric delivered tomorrow, and these guys are seriously making me want to get an amp just to fuck around with instrumental metal stuff again. A few years ago (when I had a working electric guitar and amp...) I used to just fuck around and jam out similarly to this. No drums or bass, but I still liked it. Don't know why I never sought out professional music in the same vein. Once again, many thanks ☐

No problem:) I really need to get into playing something. I need drums, because I'm really into the idea of playing drums now.

There's a part at 1:40 in the last song I posted that I keep replaying over and over again because it sounds so cool...

So much for being far away from that album. I did kind of change things around, so it got closer faster...

I hate traditional Christmas songs (overplayed etc.), that's why I called that Venom song my Christmas theme.

Tristania - Fate

Seeded me up a new Pandora station, need to find more like this.
Most Goth/Symphonic metal I have focuses on female-only vocals - I like the contrast between Tristania's male/female singers. Also seeded the station with Cradle of Filth's "Nymphetamine (Fix)" (the only CoF song I like :-).

While I let Pandora come up with its suggestions, anybody else with a similar taste have any suggestions for me?

Bah wtf. Pandora put on Disturbed. I like the band, but that's just a completely different type of metal! First thumbs-down on the list...

Then it followed up with what I'm still listening to - Leaves' Eyes' "Elegy". Not thumbs-upping it as it's not what I made the list for, but it's my favourite LE song, so I'll let it play through :)

Bloody hell, now it put on Chevelle... You suck, Pandora :(

Thumbs down

Draconian - On Sunday They Will Kill The World

Hope this one doesn't suck :)

Edit: Thumbs up, tagging this post :)
