It's cool listening to all of this stuff because it brings me back to moments of me having my parents play it when I was like 10 and younger (18 right now). I know so many of these so well on multiple albums. Fantomas, Faith No More, Mr. Bungle, Tomahawk, all of them.

I think there's something about the music you listen to when your a small child that makes you remember it for the rest of your life and like it forever as well. It seems kind of magical to hear it and just know where the song is going and how it sounds before you even really can name it...you know? (Hope that made sense)

I get what you mean completely, though I don't think that's entirely the case with me. There are things I remember liking when I was a kid that I wonder why the hell I ever liked something so godawful. I can't name specifics, though.
