The Emperor-King is constitutionally the executive branch. Not just the head of the Executive Branch, but its entire body. The office of the emperor is a hereditary office that follows Absolute Cognatic Primogeniture which is, of course, something that historically didn't just appear until late 20th century.

They rose out of the ashes of many former Asian states that were destroyed or ruined when the Soviet Union unleashed its nuclear arsenal. Badly effected were the Chinese; they were mostly eradicated from the continent due to Japanese concentration camps.

It's an African country right around where Tanzania is. Originally a British colony, it became independent in the late 1950s after a four-year war. The country is now one of the most developed countries in Africa, known for finance, technology, and environmentalism, and the capital city is likened to London or Tokyo. Its culture emphasizes individual artistic expression.

The National Anthem, a so-called Hajimete no Oto, does not seem to have a direct relation with their nation's identity or any important event -which is not very common for a national anthem. Maybe I'm missing something?

It is a song written as if it were from the perspective of Hatsune Miku, who is said to have founded Hatsunia over 2700 years ago, according to legend. But she continued to live on as the main cultural symbol of Hatsunia. The song is literally related to the nation's identity (Hatsune [初音] and Hajimete no Oto [初めての音] mean "first sound").

Also learned, among aforementioned, is that humanity still exists actually, instead of extinction. So... I hope they learned not to mess up!

Also also... was there an error there? The estimated human population is set from 3,800,000 to 4,100,000 depending on whether or not settlements in outer space count.

Bastarneia's etymological origin has several hypotheses (including terms that mean "binding" or "wagon," and of course, the word "bastard"), and there is uncertainty as to whether it is self-named.

The area was settled mostly by Germanic peoples coming from the Baltic coast in the 3rd century, who became known as the Bastarnae, but there are theories that they weren't all Germanic. Later, a principality was established. It was also part of the Polish-Lithuanian Commonwealth, the Austro-Hungarian Empire, and the Soviet Union at different points of its history. After the Cold War, it was a neutral constitutional monarchy between NATO and the post-Soviet CIS, but became part of the European Union a couple decades later. It is a poor country, but it has good agriculture.

From their overview factbook:

The Fylkirate literally means the Fylkir's holding, referring to the religious and political term used to refer to the Religious Leader of all Norden People (The Fylkir). Hermand, which is the geographical location of the region, means 'The High Cliff'.

The Democratic Socialist Republic of Karevka (DSRK) is supposed to be a stand-in Soviet Union, although with major differences like the allowance of private business (But the state is a partial owner) or the fact that they allow LGBT marriage. It is a unitary republic located on the continent of Mu in the Pacific Ocean, with a population and economy somewhat larger than the United States. The country became independent from the UK in 1919, and was neutral until the Cold War, where it sided with the Soviet Union. After the Cold War, it switched to a capitalist economy. It has a highly developed economy with advanced technology, but it has been known to violate human rights on a regular basis.
