Oswald's Mood: Overwhelmed

"When a leader is a social conservative, such as Herr Pinochet here, and one who values the conservative order of things, I don't seem to have any reason to withhold commendation for. But in Herr Pinochet's case? This is where I have many—and many—reservations towards even a man who upholds social conservative values. I would shrug off the thought of a single person—even a group of people—turning a country into what is essentially just a large, privatized monopoly imposed upon a nation state, because I do not believe such a feat would ever be pulled through. But the nation of Chile under Herr Pinochet has proved me wrong. What I think is impossible to happen is liable to possibly happen eventually, and the thought gives me a bit of a scare when I think about it. The unrestrictive capitalism is...unappealing. Now, I am not against capitalism just so people know, Herr Pinochet's decision to trademark and copyright his country under this anarcho-capitalist system is, to be truthful, an unwise decision.

"The use of prisoners of war to construct children's theme parks is nothing short of ironic, and learning this is just offensive for me to fully stomach. And for children and families to go to places of child-like entertainment was built by prisoners of war...I have no words to describe the mood I am currently feeling. Am I feeling disgust or angry? Am I feeling perhaps more, just from all of this from a man turning a country into a theme park of capitalism running loosely? Of course there are plenty of things to Herr Pinochet than what I have mentioned, and I intend to discuss more of those things in the future..."

-His Imperial Majesty the Emperor of the Imperial Fatherland, Oswald

Game idea: Take a shot for every time the word: 'Herr Pinochet' is mentioned.

Symbol of the Directorate

The Statement on Oswald

"Huh, he is a leader of a thing that's basically Germany on steroids, this probably ain't good, knowing how infamous record the Germans have. Although, let's get to what the Emperor Oswald has to offer, right?"

"He got the throne of Emperor after the death of his parents, and also inherited a messy and complicated war. That's a quite complicated situation, and he probably didn't wanted to get dragged in this, but at least he adapted quickly to that, and didn't start sobbing like a baby. Now, we usually aren't fans of royals (especially those who are more like celebrities than anything), but Oswald's triumph when considering his backstory is an impressive feat."

"Now, him using welfare to contain the communist enemies is clever as well, because with it you can appease the worker class, which is also already more conservative than the middle class. At least he is not fully into laissez-faire claptrap, because the worsening conditions of it will eventually drag the citizens in fangs of red enemies. Him committing to military spending is understandable too, because he has a war to wage, and there is a good industry and population in the first place for such a conflict.."

"Last, time for the personality. Well, what can we say... Even when he was a teenager, he still behaved more like an adult than actual adults which were around him. And a staunch traditionalism and conservatism? He is something which we would call an "old soul", but that's not necessarily bad - it shows that not all of youth have descended in the rabbit hole of liberalism, and that he is connected to the ways of his ancestors. He also takes his role of a military commander very serious, with "no bs" approach, and is a hilariously ardent meat eater. Overall, not too bad. If only some of our members were like that..."

"Ah, the Directorate seems to be a government based in a region that should resemble Central Oriental in our world, which is unfortunate still under the rule of the Kozavian Empire and now highly unstable politically. That said, let us not draw too many parallels between universes. We should focus on who these people are."

"I am for one in great support of their secular and nationalist stance, and would be pleased to know if they are capable of holding themselves true to social democracy. We both want to escape the accusations of being an oligarchy, do we not? While their first democratic elections might have been... disputable, they carried the nation well across the transition from a part of the USSR to an independent state, as well as a border war with the Uzbek. Moreover, the modern Directorate has been aware and cautious of modern diplomacy tricks. I suppose that I will keep a watchful eye on them, even if no name has been revealed."

PMT/Early FT - Decopunk. Zitravgrad is a crowned republic in a planet somewhere else in the universe. The formerly wartorn nation keeps a facade of normalcy and order while enjoying the societal and cultural decadence that marks the new Roaring Twenties. The paranoid authoritarian government tries its best to uphold order in the face of uncertainty, while its people want nothing more than a breathing space. A deal that works, but maybe not in the long run. |

My conclusion: Miroslavsky really needs a vacation for a week or two, for he looks really exhausted. Trust me, it's really useful to divert sight from a problem, and after some time look at it with a fresh eye." -Shawn Bjornson
