Well if by BN you mean the nation below you then they will mysteriously disappear, never to be seen again. If you mean the nation below me, they would be doing our job for us.

Spreading propaganda against the state

A small fine, and removal of the propaganda. Depending on the amount. Free speech exists, but if you overly abuse it (ex. frequent hate speech, excessive anti-state propaganda, etc.), you get fined.

Putting up an overly large poster of YL's face over YL's bedroom/office window (without permission)?

The closest thing Val'Grazia has to WMDs are arcane constructs, which can't be moved due to it being tied to lay line convergence. Although the parts themselves can be transported. However, due to the nature of arcane constructs, they have been banned by the Intercollege Confederation of Mages. If you are found to be transporting parts to make one, you are sentenced to go to a forced labour camp. If you were to lose some of the parts during transport, you would be forced to search whilst not having access to any water or food until you found it.

Instant involuntary brain-editing. Black market deals can translate to Revenancy technology getting into alien hands... and that's a BIG no-no here.

Using entropy-reversal fields to reverse completely rotten and rancid meat into an edible state, then lying about its expiration date to make it appear fresh and selling it to unknowing customers
