Well, being irresponsible is not a crime. You will answer for what actually happened, so let's go...

The 2020 Beirut Explosion led to 218 deaths, 7,000 injuries, US$15 billion in property damage as well as leaving an estimated 300,000 people homeless.

Death penalty, simply.

Secretly living in someone's basement/attic, without that person's permission or even knowledge.

Merulla is the land of the brave, the fair and of the heroes.

A great kingdom consisting of fifteen federative like states, with a decentralized power, where the real king is the Merullean people.

Come and discover Merulla, where the waves are born.

Usually not a crime, but if it gets weird we'll have to make them do community service for up to a month.

Throwing a pie to the leader's face.

Seen as a sign of protest, so it will be considered as treason which is punishable by life imprisonment.

Depending on the type you have and medical reasons, no fine needed, but will be questioned on why you haven't taken them, otherwise it is rehab time with the amphetamine taken away

Astronomers will first check if that actually happened. If yes, that's a crime against humanity and whoever did that now owes all eight billion people on earth trillions of dollars to rebuild the moon, as well as a death sentence on their head.

If they didn't do it, they'd be fined $100 for misinformation and hacking, and then let go.

Not a crime until you are asked to leave and you refuse to, in which case it becomes criminal trespass and you will be forcibly removed from the premises by any and all force necessary, up to an including lethal force.

Then you will be forced to reimburse the owner(s) of the premises for the cost of your removal along with any damage you might have caused to their property.
