Not specifically a crime but depending on the circumstances you could be charged with criminal neglect and forced to pay damages.

Indefinite suspension of business license and a seizure of the person's assets on production

Major company (must have 25+ personel )

All executives and their family members executed, all assets of the company seized and if the company have royal approval then it's receding

For violation of her Majesty's fair competition act and violation of public trust and if a major company subversion of national interest and collusion with foreign powers

Well seeing whatever the competition was they would probably be thrown out, but the sports law in our nation states so:

A sports crime committed at district level: 4,000 cash

A sports crime committed at state level: 30,000 cash

A sports crime committed at national level: 6,50,000 cash or 5 months medium security prison

In Northern Maine, these crimes are taken very seriously as sports is a large part of our national pride. Therefore, while the punishments are quite extreme, they are just. (also all fines left unpaid will lead to the following prison sentences: district level: 50 hours, state level: 1 week, national level: 8 months. [all medium security prisons].

Ummmm..... How about public obscenity  ?

Would definitely be seen as odd and it would not be well-received, but not technically a crime if there's no direct blasphemy against the Abrahamic faiths.

Depends

If it's an old government building, forced labor for five years for

Deliberate Arson of Imperial Property

If it's an old privately owned building, it relies on the property owner to make punishment

If no one claimed the old abandoned building and you get caught, then it's 10 lashes and house arrest for five years

If no one claimed the building and you don't get caught, good job I guess

Depending on the shire, ranging from several months worth of community service (usually involving fecal matters such as punitive labor on a fertilizer factory) to ~15 lashes and two months of prison

Selling infected bushmeat without knowing of it being infected?

Having to pay tens or hundreds of thousands in compensation to those infected, depending on how bad they get sick.

Depends a lot: If you're unfairly paying less for the same quantity and quality of work it could get you some severe fines, and worst case scenario your business could be shut down. If it's simply a matter that the female employees work less time, or are working a lower-priority job, etc. then not a crime.

Dealt with on a case by case basis. If it's a vitamin or supplement, not a federal crime. If it's cancer medication, probably charges with reckless endangerment

First they will basically take you by force into a central public area, then they would implement Public Humiliation into you and finally a Capital Punishment in the gallow if the State wants, so everyone sees him or her having a sign saying "This person was drunk dont be like (him/ her)"

The principal objective of this is to cause fear and make it a warning to the secretly drunk inside their homes, etc. This tactic goes as well for the recreative drug use, smoking and videogames. Both the seller and the user. Welcome to Andmueed the land of "Touching the grass."

Littering in Public Areas or national parks.
