I sort of have to wonder if they're even using that term correctly anymore. Correct me if I'm wrong but isn't that term supposed to be used for the dipshit children/teenagers trying to troll this site (and failing miserably) during summer break, hence, "summerposter?" People here overuse that term, tossing "summie" left and right, so bloody much that it may as well just have no meaning, or it means "somebody I don't like." I see more of those people using that term to death than I do noobs/actual summerposters.

Summies tend to be low-effort posters who have no idea how to make a proper response to anything or lack sufficient literacy skills, given it clearly shows in their posts. And I'm not talking about google translate gore either. Like, actually awful formatting, spelling, and structure with a whole lot in common with English homework from a grade-schooler before the first dozen rounds of revision.

Ah yes the good old "we're not nazis but".

Another (quite annoying) cliché, I think it has been mentioned before, the sudden huge increase of slavery nations...

Thinking about my current projects, probably this: Mary Sue self-inserts and its reverse, Completely Evil fascist dark lords, all based on the political axis map. I know this cliché has been beaten to death in this thread, but I do think that there is far more that can be gained by focusing on imperfect (or evil) systems as opposed to cliché political divisions ("conservative", "communist"), etc.

Then again this is probably just due to my obsession with creating systematically evil nations, indeed I remembered the reason I always put [IC] on my factbooks is because some of it are so atrociously evil and anger-inducing in (I guess) non-traditional ways that some NSG poster attacked me with it during a discussion, unaware that the factbooks are fiction and not my IRL ramblings.

In fact, I've noticed in general the people who use the 'low-effort poster' meaning of the term are all people who are relatively new to this site.

I'm sorry but new players can't come in and decide to change what NS slang means.

As someone who does run an Islamic nation, I will say most Islamic nations on NS are pretty cringe. I can't say mine is exactly high effort (I've been here since 2016 and barely have anything in my factbooks) but it certainly avoids a lot of the cringey tropes. I generally avoid any sort of in character interaction with other Islamic nations on NS as a result because I really do not want my nation associated with that. I've seen a few other Islamic nations that are actually sensible and not operating off of stereotypes around NS, but most of them are pretty bad with terrorism, harems, slavery, and just generally being Saudi clones.

Which is a shame really. Islam is a religion that is just as complex and polythitic as Christianity. It'd be interesting to see something like a nation made up of a branch inspired by Sufism, or a 'Jihad of the Pen' nation that tries to spread their branch of Islam through intellectualism and debate rather than "haha, the funny brown people blow up buildings."

(And before anyone bonks me over the head by saying "why don't u do it?" I technically am. I have a few projects that are doing just that. However, I like seeing other people's interpretation of something.)

Agreed with you there on the cringiness. (is that a word?) One of my nations is an Islamic nation too, but indeed without harems, slave markets, rampant terrorism, etc. It is however, an authoritarian "socialist state" which came to be through a coup d'etat. Which is quite cliché but not unthinkable.

I mean no one says you can't use NS stats for your nation, but there's always the arguments that break out between NS stat and non-NS stat users. Admittedly the instigator is usually the NS stat users who think that non-NS stat users 'aren't playing the game properly' (even though there is no 'proper' way to play this game) or, as was somewhat common back in the day, 'either noobs or people who can't accept the flaws in their choices'.

Eh, I mean the "special factor" that differs Nazism and other fascism (the latter is still an abomination, mind you) is that Nazism specifically aims for aggressive conquests and subjugation, a total war that inevitably means an eventual government-planned wartime economy.

Which is a shame really. Islam is a religion that is just as complex and polythitic as Christianity. It'd be interesting to see something like a nation made up of a branch inspired by Sufism, or a 'Jihad of the Pen' nation that tries to spread their branch of Islam through intellectualism and debate rather than "haha, the funny brown people blow up buildings."

(And before anyone bonks me over the head by saying "why don't u do it?" I technically am. I have a few projects that are doing just that. However, I like seeing other people's interpretation of something.)

You know you're now just pushing me to implement my IRL thoughts about Islam, and how one can theoretically insert as much heresy and invention as possible in it for various purposes, and the potential strategies to achieve that and counter resistances against it, into another NS nation project.

AFRIKAN STAAT

It is an apocalyptic total war of survival. A crusade between two forces: that of the civilization of the White race against the Serpent. Only one side will win and inherit all of Africa, for the other will be utterly and completely annihilated.

I agree with this, but don't Psychotic Dictatorships also have low economic freedom? Didn't the Nazis do mass privatization of many industries? I guess they'll be more like Iron Fists Consumerists.

Per how the WA categories works, Iron Fists Consumerists is only medium economic freedoms.

Don't know if that matters in terms of 'How Nazi Germany would be categorized in terms of NationStates' much tho lol.

Yes, I chose Iron Fist Consumerists because the Nazis still had mostly regulated capitalism but weren't socialist either.
