The Inkopolitian State wrote:

In this timeline, the United Kingdom proposed a referendum in 1949 to transform the country into a republic. This referendum succeeded, and the United Kingdom was renamed to the United Republic. This referendum also saw the abolition of the House of Lords and the installation of welfare within Great Britain.

Overview of Inkopolitia wrote:

The Great Dying

Thanks to a disease, Inkings and Octolings alike faced a catastrophe of unknown proportions. The disease spread rapidly and killed rapidly. The reason why it spread so rapidly was because of the poor sanitization in urban centers. This disease lasted from 1600 to 1604. The disease, originating in Takodisian territories and killing 56% of the Octoling population, soon spread to Inkings, killing 49% of the Inking population. This initiated massive changes in Inkceph society. Most Anthropologists believe that if the plague -as terrible as it was- didn't happen, the uncontrolled population of Inkcephs would be devastating to modern-day Inkopolitia, as the country would likely suffer from problems related to overpopulation.

I have learned about a disease that wiped a good percentage of them, and given the death rates and all, we Valentians can relate, yo... Disease, war, whatever... they have been majorly devastating for all of us, and I'm sad to hear that the 4-year-long disease was... let's just say it's starting to sound like the Inking version of The Black Plague.

The Admiral (WIP) wrote:
Sensor interference
Vessels of the Fleet exhibit a degenerative effect on most forms of sensing within their area of manifestation, equivalent to targeted electromagnetic interference (though with no clear source). This effect is far more pronounced on video footage, which is high-universally corrupted upon recording any portion of the Fleet during a manifestation.

This is more or less the thing that makes it a nightmare for people like Clarissa. She would more or less be extremely helpless when the interference struck her, and she cannot help but just to sit there until help comes along. I assume that this will be the same for other devices, AIs, and the like, and given the Valentians' reliance on tech for the most parts, this is gonna suck IF they declared war on us.

NGR's International Relations wrote:

At least, even when counting Russia and some of the countries and states that it might have under it. A tad weird to me, because I always see Russia as the one having a crapton of people. Also sad that there isn't a mention of most of the SE Asian powers, or at least the colonies just yet. Maybe I will wait!

"The pre-Valentian history was identical to the history of what was known as "Earth with non-disastrous Cold War results". For this parallel, the Cold War escalated and the world was separated to two sides: The Western Hemisphere (USA and its allies), and The Eastern Hemisphere (USSR and its allies). While there were constant conflicts, one positive side about the war was that the technology has advanced much further than anyone has seen - Quantum Physics, Short-Distance Teleportation, Immortality was in the works, Dumb AIs are being made... a bloodshed with scientific advancement with its side effect, as the survivors have commented."

The Earth that this nation came from had.. "Non-disastrous Cold War results", along with tech advancing further beyond what it is currently, nice. That and uh..they like to use big words, thats for sure. 🤪

They have a superweapon that converts the matter of its targets into energy, with enormous destructive potential. Fortunately, it uses its extreme precision to greatly limit collateral damage. It's also unknown how they came into possession of this weapon, and it appears as a shapeshifting airplane.

Empress Alicia survived a terror attack which killed her mother and sister, who were seemingly hit out of sheer bad luck since the terrorists weren't even targeting the royal family. Her mother died instantly, while her sister took some time to succumb to internal bleeding - Alicia was only really affected by the loss of her sister, since her parents didn't care much for her in her childhood.

The national deity of Khoronzon is known as the Void-Being. Its true name is extremely long and almost unpronounceable, and even its mere utterance is said to damage reality. The Void-Being resides in an alternate Void dimension, where it is the only thing that exists and the personification of its realm. The religion of the Void-Being is indoctrinated into all children during primary school, and they are made to undergo a ritual initiation in the Void-Being's name when they enter secondary school.

The beginning of Inkceph civilisation was in 213 AD, when a loosely knit island village banded together to form the city-state of Iliania and proceeded to dominate its surrounding territory. This event was known as the State Jump. Other villages tried to emulate this model, creating city-states of their own, which resulted in an approximately 800-year period of constant power struggles between these city-states known as the Centuries of Conflict.

AN: The American Imperial family, the house of Reventlow, is of Russian descent and originates from the house of Romanov. There is also a noticeable lack of women in the family.
