With this technology Rapture gonna get dangerous, but not too dangerous, cuz there ain't only variables they can change. There are also constants, thingies, that are predefined and even Mercer lot gonna have to abide by them. Either way, I am glad, that he made a tourist trap, even if it's all about order and too stifled fun. It is a shame that someone like that even got to power in the first place. Judging from what I heard, he needs various twoleg tools to not die from poisoning with whatever he's drinking. Maybe better just succumb to your vice instead, so someone more competent would take over? On the other hand, there is no hope for that land, because it seems that almost everyone there is like that, more or less. Not only that, but he has no opinions on his own, and constantly makes/reverses decisions - only more proof that he is a joke."

Exuberant Superintendent T-1000/2904 Surveillant Clarissa Alanis Star Breyia « La Amoureux Chéri » Millie Taissa Butterfly Melody Coraline Jolijn Trini Clementine Hollie Samantha Zeta Harumi encountered a face. A familiar face! A very, lovely, adorable familiar face! Why, it is none other than Prime Minister Mayweather, it seems! Her mechanical heart and her CPU leaped into the 95% utilization marks, all of them trying their very best to process the overloading amount of emotion and other data that Clarissa is receiving and getting off at the moment. She quickly rushed up to her and gave her a firm but gentle hug. "Ooooh, hellooooo there! Very, very nice to see you again, haha! It's been a very, very long time, I miss you so much! How are you doing?" She composed herself and tried to keep her emotions in place for the time being. "I am so very happy, of course! You are such a caring and a kind soul, and you brought your world and your people into a better future! I am always happy to have something like that happen in other nations! Did I mention that I miss you a lot, my bestest friend? Ahh, we should go out sometime!"

Just then, Clarissa spotted yet another familiar figure, though this one she has seen before in quite recently. She was eating what appears to be a chocolate chip cookie, and Clarissa simply smiled at the little lady. "Oooh, that looks delicious! Hope you enjoy it, Kofuku! ^^" She gave a neat little wink before evaluating on about her again, "So... what are you and Mayweather doing in this place and in a time like this, really?" All of this while her shoulder pops up and has a minigun scanning the place around them "Hmm, nothing here, but that bloody newspaper kind of concerns me! A lot of strange things happen around here, I heard! But for you, my little friend... I think Fate has indeed brought us here again! Perhaps even literally, because Gwen was telling me to come here for... something, I can't remember now, I just got an emotional overload just now, haha! I have to clear my memory dumps. Anyway, I am positive on you once again! So... would two of you like to get out of here any time soon? I don't think this is a place for either of you to be here. It's very, very creepy!" Another minigun would pop off from her other shoulder, readying her defensive stance. "Just in case of... let's just say that I am sensing something and it does not feel too good, my friends. I think we should leave, like now."

And just then, another figure popped up! A familiar figure once again... Sultan Arslan! But what on Earth is he doing here as well? Clarissa began to question herself and of the people around her. What and why would all these people in an abandoned town like this? Is she in an episode? Is she having a fever dream? ... Do robots get fever dreams and delusions? Either way, she would turn to the man and talked to him casually, "Well, hello there, my friend! Ahh, I remember you as well, of course! It's been a while, but I think I have seen you a bit more frequently than Mayweather over there if I am to be honest. Anyway, I find you very positive, of course! I am very sure that the rest of the Valentians have also met you, and I am happy that things are working between us and yourself! So... I have to wonder again - what are you doing here? You know this place is not a good place to be! I am detecting movement, and it is not from us, as you can probably tell?" With 4 of them around, it could probably mean one thing; they are all trapped in this city and they have to fight their way out of it, like some ill-mannered 4-player survival horror game. "We need to get out of here," she repeated to the three of them. Given her 20 feet stature, she proceeded to gently wrap her arms around them and slowly walk around the city, while her shoulder miniguns scanned with even more intensity. Lots of movement. No visual signs.

What intrigues me more, however, is the prospect that all of this is merely an act - a show for the benefit of... whatever machinations it is he seeks to promote. And so we come to a dilemma - is Svoboda a particularly lucked-out madman, dancing along the thin line between ruin and progress? Or merely a very convincing showman, utilizing madness as a front to drive what he has built along some predetermined tract? An answer to that, I cannot give. His is not a tale fit for the wastes, though I have met several like him. He is apart from the world I call my own - and thus, it is only a glancing verdict that I may give. Whatever he is, he is dangerous - it remains to be seen whether the progress he seeks to work outweighs that danger."

"To quote, as written: 'Described as a cold and harsh leader'. Well, it is not a surprise that is what most domesticated cats act nowadays. Quite a squabble this little cat has: rivals from her former clan members and stretching herself way too thin as a result from those territorial gains for her newly forged clan of feline menaces and their insalubrious home. I'd be quite pleasantly surprised if she endorsed the idea to overthrow us, the dreaded 'twolegs'; in the end, humanity will have the last laugh over these shabby, talking forest cats."
