For BN: Elizabeth R. Sleet is presidentess of the Great Basin Kingdom, so you may share your leader's opinion of her. If you would rather someone else though, you might instead share your leader's opinion on another character listed among the cast, if they have a complete profile page (see links in signature).

It is 1881, and America still dreams of its "manifest destiny" to rule the continent. The strange pilgrims claiming a kingdom in the Great Basin apparently have other ideas.

Oh, right... she doesn't like the fact, that I won the leadership position through a serie of trials. She might not like me due to my similarity with some presidents of old world, but I still sympathize with her. No matter how many times she criticizes my lifestyle of drinkin' and smoking weed while playing video games. She went through alot during the childhood and indeed earned her position through her character, fighting a multitude of uphill battles with word, pen and Bible. And she actually had won. And now, she does everything in her power to make sure, that the less fortunate shall have much easier life than she had. I commend her for actually remembering about the commn folks. What is the most interesting is Christian polygamy. Hell, we also got legal polygamy back at Sky Reaver turf. "There's a certain kind of person - out there in the world - who seems to be out of place. I've come across many in my millennia, I have made friends of some, enemies of others, and always had a struggle to understand how they became how they are. Is it fate? Do they somehow have a perfectly unique upbringing, the exact right combination of ingredients in the right order and time? Fetal alcohol syndrome? I'm not sure. This man - Shawn something - he's one of those out of place people. Though I am loath to compare him to Lucius, they fit into the same broad - and I mean broad - category.

"As for Shawn himself. Ah, do I have to? He's in charge because he won a duel - not even a lethal duel - which he was put up to because of some factionalism in a ruling council. And then confirmed via some plebiscite. He doesn't like paperwork. I don't think anyone really does. A piece of advice for him: just don't use paperwork? That's how I do it, and it has served me quite well for the past few thousand years. It'll almost be a shame to lose him - when he inevitably faces some state or another led by someone who cares more for the welfare of that state than doing drugs all day - a shame to lose a colourful and unique character. Albeit one whose qualifications should have him place onto a jail cell bed, not a throne." - Emperor Nicholas

"Ahh, the Great Orlesian Orator, Francois D'Chautee. After collecting the information I need about him, I can and will say he's a pretty great leader and I support his political positions. I don't see why so many people are against him. In fact, if you ask me, I think what he stands for is good, and I agree with it. He's an authoritative conservative who prioritizes law enforcement, the military, nature, and technology, just like I do. I see he also has some quirks I don't have, like his impressive skull collection, and his establishment of a website to make the laws of his country clearer, and I support that. Overall, with quirky things about him and our pretty similar political positions, I can say that I think the G.Q.O is a great leader for his country!"

"So, Comrade Baker. While I certainly have great respect for his background as a revolutionary and for his commitment to his beliefs, I am afraid that his positions necessitate a good deal of critique. To be frank, I do not consider Kanumbaism to provide an effective model for post-capitalist organisation, and from what I can see of the economic and social condition in Sukuma under Baker's government they are certainly a very long way from overcoming capitalism."

"Decentralisation and appeals to autonomy are not revolutionary principles. Vague concepts of workers' ownership do not constitute the negation of capitalism, but merely a shift to another form. Furthermore, the maintenance of traditional modes of organisation, such as tribal or religious groups, is an active barrier to revolutionary development, and a point on which I would agree with Kanumba. This obsession with choice and autonomy in organisation is ultimately rooted in bourgeois conceptions of liberty, extended to the point of parody. Like all such anarchist doctrines, it is historically sterile and unable to detach itself from the capitalist systems within which it has developed."

"That said, I do not wish to be overly hostile to Comrade Baker. He has my critical support in resisting neoliberal imperialism, much as I have supported similar groups closer to home in their struggles despite our differences. I hope that Sukuma is able to overcome the fundamental theoretical errors in Kanumbaism and progress forwards into communism, whether or not this takes place under Baker's direction."

use my image to prop up an enemy of sorts, in ideals. I seek to simply cleanse the world of its sins, to start anew! To grow and offer a guiding hand to the future of man. He meanwhile wants humanity to grow in his image, rather than in the collective image of the masses, ironically. But that aside, he does seem rather long-lived, perhaps due to technology or mere miracles. As if. At least he has his head in the right place, but just a little lopsided, even if he seeks to deny the envious utopia everyone seeks, not realizing that such a stupid idea is impossible. Him and I? Sure, we are enemies, mortal enemies at that, but at least we are two sides of the same cursed coin. Maybe one day he'll see the light and give up his twisted ideals to embrace a system that sets goals to drive humanity to new heights rather than let everyone fester in their own shit as the government hand feeds them, even if they work to try to push the future closer to themselves."

But what I loathe most is the way she manipulates the international proletariat as pawns, finding ways to 'import' migrant labor and take advantage of the displaced and dispossessed. She may want 'old empires' to die, much as I do, but she seems determined to replace the old empires with one of her own, with a Gonswanza ruled by herself. Isn't that the tragedy of the long twentieth century? So many young nations opposed the old order's imperial hegemony but lacked the imagination to envision a world without any orders and instead tried to become new empires. W-What is this, A man who has ruled for nearly 17 thousand years, and is said to have immeasurable strength. I-I fear for what would happen if he sent soldiers to New Zoigai. I don't think this is a threat we are ready for. An multi- no omniversal being with an exponential amount of strength compared even to The strongest creatures known to us. Only the true and living god would be able to take down a man like him and with ultra soldiers who would only be countered by the smallest population of aliens we have. A breeding program like the barbaric nazis proposed would be the only thing to save us if a hypothetical senario occured. Even if we stopped their army and dismantled their state, their ruler would simply destory our universe and force us into another dimension, which he probably could destory.

Im very afraid to go deeper into his story, but it sounds like one of gloom, ruin, and despair. Only for him to become a very murderous and tyrannical being who literally has the entire universe under his thumb. Simply thinking about it fills me with horror. I am afraid I cannot go any further with an opinion for today. O-overall I would give him a 4/ 10 our views are very different and it scares me to know how weak I currently am.- A terrified Nemias Gregory

It is time for today's file. Ashlotte, Queen of her very own Kingdom, the Astellian realm and another whiz-kid I presume, like Yunruhan, it's kinda like the norm here, ain't it so?

A bit young to be called a Queen if you ask me, I don't even wanna know about their marital life if you ask me...but eeeeeeh! Aiyaaah. It appears Ashlotte's a, uh, not your everyday naked ape, Homo sapiens sapiens, I mean. 'Scentient Doll', huh? That raises a lot of questions over what type of AI this Ashlotte is, but hey, if she can feel love towards Lieslotte, then I guess that means she isn't a glorified Roomba. Though that War of Misunderstandings thing really makes me remember why the bosses at the Central Committee are real iffy about AI, considering that somebody had to have created the 'Dolls' before all of that happened. That magitek stuff confirms that the 'Dolls' have physical needs or maintainance issues though, and if Ashlotte wants to do that without apparently resorting to violence as a first option, then, I suppose there's ok. If a but weird, but, that's just me.

Sheesh, imagine a world without men though, musn't be fun, not at all. I thought we Ahnu had it rough there, not sure if that Rosa Mystica stuff makes up for that.

What a long day. Somebody else to attend to, normally I only get one dossier but this folder has two on them, for some reason. Damn. And I thought I'd leave early.

Okaaaaay, time to check out...Laura Ortiz.

Well, 'Why Sometimes It's Better To Leave The Throne Empty' isn't an exaggeration, it's an understatement. Damn, and I thought Yunru-han was in need of some neural therapy. The whole war-child thing in the front and the eensie-weensie little tidbit about a head injury isn't good for somebody's developmental years when those wires are being connected up there in the noggin. Not to mention the fact Ortiz is chugging down liquor as if every day was pay-day; sheesh, I've heard of the Three Martini Lunch, but she likely takes breakfast, lunch and dinner as an opportunity to kill whatever functional neurons they have left whenever they aren't killing their own people. Damn, what a train-wreck.

But nobody's replaced her, so that means that fear is working for now, or that she actually does have some bare minimum of effort in seeing to her citizens' quality of life; though if you ask me, it's a miracle the Americans and Chinese haven't ganged up on them. Must be the doings of that Alexander Schloss guy, I think he'll go places.

It seems their leader no longer lives. It seems to have given up her life for the Nacirema peoples (Americans). Its story reminds me of many of the pilots who were awarded high ranking. Parents weren't always there so they were raised by others, got into a demanding field and choked causing some of their peers and coworkers to die, then getting involved with a certain society which was considered primitive, even though that society is partially at fault for what happened (or at least it can be argued). Then they end up sacrificing themselves for that society after a very inconvenient plot twist occurs.

Hell the story of Nemias is somewhat like the story of this creature, minus the millions of people dying through a series of many wars. - Canary The Giant finally giving his opinion

"Hey her- I mean it's story isnt like mine! I am willing to admit it seems similar to a good amount of pilots who ended up dying for foreign worlds. Even the cousin species thing rings a bell. One can argue that the fate of many pilots is like this story right here, as it has happened to soo many of them Its almost like I was reading an American novel about aliens. " - Nemias Gregory

"I have always enjoyed documenting the madness of the weak-willed. This story, I've seen this story time and time again. It seems every galaxy has at least one, a hypocritical, murderous, fool whose exploits are praised - though the words of the fearful and sycophantic are hardly much currency - by those small-minded people they have around them. No doubt this one can hear me now, if this broadcast towards him can be detected by his equipment.

"Take heed, your time is coming to an end. Your superstition will not save you from being scoured from the face of the omniverse by my forces. There are those whose superstitious beliefs demand they submit to me - and those whose beliefs demand they let me kill them - for they believe I am a judging and vengeful God. Look up to the skies, and see my fleet when it approaches, then pray hard little one. Pray hard, and maybe your God will let you die quickly." - Emperor Nicholas

"Sadly, I ain't going to jail anytime soon. I just wonder, why are these superduper space emperors are mostly dark brooding lot with no smile? Is that because of space radiation or something? Either way, he really must cheer up, relax and accept the fact, that not all means can be justified. There are lines, he better not cross, cuz if he crosses, there will be no redemption off him, and no matter how hard he will try to justify it with "this was for the empire", he will know, that he did something unforgivable. Still, while this dude is caring ofr his empire, the means make this rather creepy and dark. Plus, he just put too much in his hands! Hls empire relies on him, and if he loses to someone even more mighty thasn he is... what's gonna happen? That's why we, Sky Reavers have created a decentralzied system, where the leader is more like a First Citizen, and the people can act independently. A self-managing system, which can be guided. Command economy is also too inflexible and can't adapt fast, even though it has it's own advantages."Overboss Liam Navarro
