A skilled statesman, an accomplished general, a fearsome opponent, a unifier of a nation, but a trustworthy friend is not one of them. The man is like a castle, with his true emotions being nigh-impenetrable. Such is not a way for humans to live. Yet, I cannot help but see him with a level of respect, possibly even a worthy opponent. Overall, I am neutral, perhaps even weary about Miroslavsky. If only I could see him in battle, perhaps then I would truly know the man that is the King of Ice."

"You are blessed with a name of a general who has never been defeated in a battle, Gospodin Suvorov. I will turn my attention to you and see whether you will live up to your name. I admire men of military and especially those with strong and independent characters... and you are a man of such description. The means of your rise to power was dramatic and violent, not too different from mine, but how fortunate (or perhaps unfortunate in your opinion?) for you that people received you quite quickly. But that said, it seems you must be struggling with the international community -- well, if your world was even capable of being a community in the first place."

"Strive on... I will watch and see. A patriot of his own nation, and a reliable head of his allies -- maybe you will fit into the glory of your name but only after much struggle. You inherited a difficult nation in a difficult time, after all."

I think I already talked about your stoic looks, and perhaps the rather uncomfortable part of your history involving some purging. That was unfortunate, but... I would be lying if I didn't say that we need to break a few eggs for an omelette. It's no use saving everyone sometimes, isn't it? You and me, both. Anyway, I am always happy to see you again, and I heard that you told Gwen a while back about dropping for a tea. We certainly won't mind, and I know she won't! Just that we would like to apologise for the relative lack of activity between our two nations. Quick question though, which I think you don't really get too often: Do you like to write with a normal ballpoint pen, or a fountain pen? Ahh, back when I was of a relatively normal size, I always swear by pencils and ballpoint pens. Fountain pens are good for elegance, but wow, one of them exploded and leaked in my suit. And it was my favorite suit! Ahh, now that I am, you know, not as small, I still have a smaller body now and then to enjoy normal human activities. I do miss writing now and then instead of just tapping on screens or typing on keyboards. Oh, I'm sorry, I seemed to be holding you back a little. We should see each other again soon! "I prefer communicating in person, or via keyboard... never had good cursive handwriting, school didn't care too much, and I before becoming the Overboss, I was a road warrior, then lost a motorbike in a fight, became a foot man-at-arms, and then I attained a rank of man-o-war. Just like him, I just run into battle head on, sure, I use clever ambushes and such, but I love that thrill! Either of these care about honing combat skills rather than good ol' cursive writing. Sure, this is elegant and such... but elegance doesn't fit me. Got too many battle scars on my face, and I am just too large. Besides, I look ridiculous in elegant and classy outfits. I'll always wear either metalhead outfit, beach one, or my battle armor.

Hah, maybe the last ain't the reason, after all, Valentijn of Thousand Names is a giant, and he can be really elegant. I wonder, if he will ever find a cat large enough for his current height? A catzilla, ya' know! Either way, I can only like him! He is just like that! Sure, I can state our opinion again, but I won't, because our disposition towards him and his great and adorable country never changed. They were friends, they are friends, and they will be our friends! Besides, I love cats too! Have a big maine coon, such a hunter.

Perhaps... or maybe purrhaps, we can extend our friendship somehow. Maybe make a trade deal? How about some furniture, made by fine artisans? Or maybe booze and weed?" -Shawn Bjornson

Mr. Vereyn, your politics confuse me. You are an avid supporter of absolutism, yet you strengthen the democracy of your empire? Do you do this because it is necessary, or is there an ulterior motive? I wish the best for your country.

Also, forgive me for saying, but I find this rather funny. Mr. Vereyn, you look uncannily similar to the 33rd president of the United States, Harry S Truman.

I see, that she prefers to let business get fatter, so they would be able to create more work places and be a part of infrastructure, but does she care about worker rights? Reports claim, that she tries to be relatable for a common man. So far, I'll keep it neutral, but we are possibly open for business if she likes to interact with us.

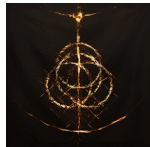

Interesting, that she also has some Windsor blood... This could open up some unique political opportunities for her within UK, if she plays her cards when the time is right.

And I don't exactly understand, why did she hide her love to use a hunting bow, the old world weapon. Maybe they care more about fashion in thier place, than we do. I mean, I don't hide the fact, that I use my wardub, a baseball bat with silver spikes as a weapon. For example, during one of my latest operations, I participated, before I was the overboss, I smashed seven ISIS terrorist skulls with it."-Shawn Bjornson

It's certainly a pleasure, I will definitely give it that! A very gifted and elegant lady, suitable for all things of her world. It would seem that we do have a bit of a common ground with our Slavic roots, though I do admit, it's not as straightforward as it seems, yes? "Her engagement document was the first document ever to give her the Russian name of "Feodora Alexandrovna", which her fiancé chose for her and which would be the source of resentment for some people who had known her before." Very nice nonetheless, I am not the one to judge on such a thing; it's simply my interest! Anyway, while I am not exactly the mathematician type, I suppose we still can cover a common ground of topic and interest with my expertise on electricity and physics as a whole. If your husband does not mind, I would certainly like to have a bit of chat with you and talk about our own history here and there. I can even bring some of my Valentian friends, and you can bring your friends too, if it helps to reduce the awkwardness.

I should contact spymaster Blackbird and determine, if this theory true in our world. He probably knows even more old world secrets, which are rather... shocking. And so are his weapons and thingies. Useful, when ya' need to charge the smartphone, or perhaps electrocute your enemy. And he not only does know, how to use electric power as weapon, but also knows how exactly it works, and how those curretns go. I gotta admit, I ain't into physics myself...As for electronics... I remember, how during the North Korean campaign, I took a manual and booze, and tried to fix a trashbot for myself, but it exploded after working for a few hours. Perhaps he could teach me a thing or two."-Shawn Bjornson

"How particular, an AI that is dedicated to creating a workless paradise for its habitants. I have yet to see such a thing manifest in the Empire as we have advanced intelligence but they are only purposed for military production and getting advice regarding ongoing field missions. Hmm, I do think it is unlikely that we would actually strive for utopia. Well, maybe not we, perhaps, just my long, long observation of the Alkdorian people. They would possibly go mad if they had to operate in a society that is entirely dictated and operated by machine, and not by man. But I could be very wrong and I have plenty, if not an infinite amount of time to be proven wrong but otherwise currently? I highly doubt the likeliness of the possibility of automated utopia. Otherwise, my thoughts on the AI is positive as I find her fascinating and curious. Additionally having an audience with her may be quite fun. If possible."

All right, enough poetry, or an attempt at one. Yeah, I have not a lot of positive words for him, have I? Someone who is going into biological and chemical warfare, that is not going to sit well with us. Although, his positive attitude on AIs are refreshing. Far too long so many people say "Ohh why is your wife a brain-dead robot?" And then I tell them "Do you know I can drop a tree on you?" People tend to clam up when I get serious. Psychological warfare worked for me, so why should I have WMDs for offensives? Anyway, yeah, I am not sure about this guy.
