Man goes home after selling his fungi. he walks on the dark streets of Mars Colony #55617, casting glances every which way as he ponders aliens stalking him, angry for him having taken their foods. Man increases his walking speed.

Man arrives at his colonial dome, uses his keycard to open the door, and steps inside. He breathes in the scent of freshly-cleaned apartment and sits on his couch. he uses the remote to turn on the TV, cutting to static before arriving at 55617 News, his favorite state-run news organization. It speaks of a new flavor of ice cream being sold in a different colony. Bored, Man reads a magazine about jet skis until he hears something about fungi on the news. Curious, he turns the volume up and puts away to magazine.

'In other news, a bakery here in Mars Colony #55617 has been selling poisonous alien fungi to the locals. It tastes good, but slowly disables your nervous system, which includes the brain. No fungi is to be eaten, touched, or looked at until we find the people who harvested this fungi and determine more about the fungi itself. Approximately 50 people have died as a result.

Then there was a knock at the door.

Man is the leader of the Mars Colony #55617, who was personally involved with the investigation on the poisonous alien fungi bakery. He looks at his virtual reality goggles, showing a new notification. He puts them on, and then joins a call, with two other people, an alien and a woman. Both of them tell the Man that the bakery owner is dead and the Man orders his body disposed of.

He takes off the goggles, and enters his personal transportation vehicle, unusually long for the colony, but symbolizes how important this Man is. He tells the driver to head to the 55617 News studios, and is taken there in a flash.

After leaving the news studio, Man gets a call from Eman Bezan himself, the leader of Mars Colony #1. Bezan is angry that such wrongful lies were muttered by Man in the news studio and wants him to give up his job.

As Man arrives in the office of Bezan, Bezan surprises him by giving him the job of leader of the better Mars Colony #29, with massive surpluses of minerals and massive cities, while Mars Colony #55617 is destroyed - except for the fungi bakery that poisoned 50 people, which turned into a massive mall which sold various alien fungi.
