“Whilst I am normally opposed to Monarchists and Emperors, I find that we share some of the same views of our respective nations. A strong military and government must be in place in order for a nation to thrive in this modern age. The deaths of those who serve the nation, while tragic, are unfortunate necessities that lay the foundation for prosperity and peace in our time. Of his many views, the only ones I find myself disagreeing with are the lack of laws in place to protect the minority from the majority, as well as a lack of transitional policies that would turn his government from an authoritarian reign to one for the people. The latter, while unforgivable, is a result of his belief system. But his lack of protection for those in his nation displays a lack of care for the nation’s wellbeing. He cannot advocate for serving the greater good if he does not protect all of his citizens.

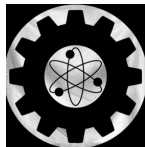

The last thing that I find to bother me is of his disposition. When you lead a nation you must be confident and bold, both in private and in public. Doubting and double-guessing your own actions will be detected by those looking to take your power. It will also cause you to stumble, and eventually, fall. I have no other qualms with him, and wish the Emperor the best of luck in his future.”

Is there anything about Mr. White there is to like? He just sits at his desk all day answering questions and playing video games, apparently. And drinking soda, gross, you're an adult man. "Dude got really lots of money and has to control the flows, so this large corporation ain't gonna collapse upon itself... I wonder, what if feels like to be a CEO? Cuz, being an Overboss of a raider commonwealth is a bit different. We value profit, for it helps our cause, while Neptunvian cause is the profit. We got a distinct ideology, we follow and strive for. And we are in fact a semi-anarchy with lots of self-rule. Wish, I he was more distinctive person... Also wonder, why does he hide his face? Is this for mystery feeling, or perhaps there are other reasons? Like maybe... Ugly looking pimple or something? Either way, I feel, like if I every get my hands on Neptunvian shares, I feel, that long term bull marketing would be a better course to gain something as there might be a snowball effect of it's growth. Back at Sky Reaver turf we don't let corporations grow too much, for we also gotta care for the people and smaller businesses." Overboss Liam Navarro

"Now, come on! This dude just judges someone for drinkin' soda. Not even booze! Really? Okay, boomer! I love soda and video games and I still became the Overboss of Sky Reavers and deserved that position, after facing the former overboss in a series of hard challenges and I know how to lead a bunch of freedom lovin' folks to cannabis, sex and glory! I'd rather be an eternal child, if being an adult means being a totalitarian pushy asshole! Besides, many totalitarian leaders are very immature and in a bad way, like Karen got some superpower. And this dude also claims, that racism was invented by anglo-zionists... yeah, right! Just another conspiracy. But with all that, despite all shortcomings, he also actually managed to deliver alot for his people! Universal healthcare, quality education, and he also didn't let US of A screw him over! Impressive! Dude is a dictator with quirks, I condemn his some of his methods, but he actually gets shit done! If there is a person, whom I both greatly respect and disrespect at the same time, it's Ziyadat." Overboss Liam Navarro

"I cannot say I had high expectations for a man who goes by the title 'overboss', a title that seemingly calls back to the Italian Mafias of old. To say my expectations were blown away is to understate.

He had full opportunity to take power for himself - to establish a state when he beat the living shit out of the previous leader. And yet, he shows the humility a good man should have. He kept true to his people and fought for them and their freedom. I do not fully support his ideals, however. I am no capitalist, I despise money and believe for its abolishment. However, as major as that disagreement is, to deny Mr. Navarro the respect he deserves is foolish. He is a freedom fighter, and I shall treat him as such. Long live the Revolution, Cowboy."

has the upper hand here, so the struggle may as well be a united front if death-by-a-thousand-cuts can be guaranteed. Though risking another Gary Smith means it is all a delicate issue.

But, eh? What can I say? You're the self-made man that rose to be a capable military commander against a superior enemy, on paper that is. Despite the limits of the, uh, material conditions that you're from. So, you must be doing something right, even if I think that maybe there will have to be a time where Kanumbaism is upheld through more refined means as discourse and threats can only maintain so much.

We're both figureheads of sorts, I guess. And I can relate to representing something that gets in the way of ideals to follow and not dirtied compromises should we lose the post where we hope to do good. In your case, the issue with your 'allies' and gold in exchange for arms. In my case, well, it's not my file, so nevermind.

Keep hanging on, I guess, lest you be hanged by the URaE's toadies and puppets. Maybe a good PR angle might help too."

While I, General Onox, can't really say much about the women men power disparity in your world due to that being not very much of a concept in these lands, I, General Onox, still adore your capability to destroy these social boundaries so effectively, turning what was a male dominated state into one where everyone is equal, you remind me of that girl, Riphon, in that regard, even if in her case, it was a different social boundary, she absolutely ripped apart. However, unlike her, you seem of a more heroic disposition, an actual heroic one, not just one assigned randomly in war times.

I, General Onox, would love to duel you one day in a fight to destruction, it should be a battle with many stories told about it later, Gyahahahahahaha!

About your marriage policies, I, General Onox, am a bit more confused: Why even bother anything about that as a state, just seems not important to touch, though from what I, General Onox, heard, the worms would likely be rather interested in this act.

I must say that I am flattered by President Engelford's comments, I also respect him, although, I am on the left of the coalition. He is rather naïve when it comes to politics, hence why power has been torn out of his hands. I must say, I admire his ideals, and his courageous attempts to set up a basic government. Whilst I do not recommend a purge, place restrictions on both Secretary Washburn and Miss Anderson's power, and avoid either concentration of power or loss of power. His socialist policies are impressive for someone so young. Despite my comments on his naivety, he is still an impressive young man, whose career I will follow with interest.

Chairwoman of the Constitutional Council Janice Griffith Cartwright

Whilst I respect her attempts to mediate, fully sympathising, as I have suffered many a disagreement between Janice and whoever the defence councillor was at that specific time, Miss Washburn is still too unsubtle for a mediator role. I hope she takes this in mind.

Councillor for Social Policy Douglas Adams Harris III

Francine Anderson has respectably strong will, but naught when it comes to ideals. I admire her realism, but conservatism is not the solution. Her cult of personality is indeed worrying, and I'd like to mention her incapability to compromise is equally worrying.

Ok so who do we have here? Three people, with bios which are not very long. Writing this will probably be short and easy. So first off we have Jane Cartwright... or Janice Griffith Cartwright. Might want to be a bit more consistent with the names. So you are the current acting chairwoman because the regular one has been decapitated. No wait I mean incapacitated. So you're a moderate and a technocrat. Ok, not much to say about it. I'm not very political myself, but here it also says that you have an almost electric charisma. No idea what that means, but I'm going to assume that you get your charisma from some kind of electronic device or something.

Next up we have the Councilor for Social Policy, Douglas Adams Harris III. Very fancy name. You have a history as a freedom fighter. You apparently became one when you were 16. So you were an actual child when you had to fight. That's actually sad. You later on became president when you were 28 years old, which is still pretty young to be leading something. But right now, I've heard that many people consider you too old to rule. Maybe its just me, but I don't consider 74 to be very old. Probably because of my post-organic nature but whatever. I do hope that you have a good successor.

Lastly we have Richard Ian Granting. Your bio does tell me the least of all the ones I have read. You were an academic, and a charismatic delegate. You are also the most likely successor to the current Chair. I don't have much to say right now. From the info I've gathered, I'm going to assume that you have led a very boring, but stable life. Good for you.

Nope, Nope, NOPE. Disgust doesn't even begin to sum up my views on the mass-murderer they call their leader. Nemias has, or rather had, good intentions, then proceeded to kill 30 million people by negligence. I am sorry if anyone finds me harsh, but frankly, that explains my feelings about him.

Your local up and coming technological menace.

According to viewtopic.php?f=23&t=363018 somewhere around 5-7, because civilian tech is hyper-advanced, military, not so much. About 4.8 if we include project Hercules, which created superhumans.

“An imperialist puppet. That is what is to be said of Putiputi. Having aided her dynasty in undermining the Imperial Rule Association, and supported the occupying western powers. She served as a Tangatarehuan Quisling, and proved herself as a loyal anti-communist puppet, as shown by her revulsion towards socialism. Her dedication to avoiding her people shows an intent to maintain the same structures that the West intends to maintain, one of a figurehead leader, while Western powers puppeteer her government.

I have nothing more to say of you, you disgraced monarchic pigdog.

"I really don't like when leaders expect you to come up with an interesting comment about them when they refuse to disclose any personal information. I don't understand his motivations or his goal for changing his nation the way he did. It's all too unbelievable. One guy caused 'sweeping reforms,' but why? How? How did he even amass those troops? Why is he claiming to have invented the hamburger?

Also, you oughta watch your tongue, dick. Respect your elders! Calling that kind old empress a pigdog is uncalled for!"

Seriously though, write more in your leader's Factbook before participating in a thread like this.
