"If you were wearing that kind of clothing here in Iran then you would either have perverts soliciting you or angry men chasing you down for indecent clothing. But whatever, it's eye candy. Reforming the state while having its feet on tradition and culture instead of gleefully tearing it apart like some people with misguided views on "progress". If a nation blindly renounces its traditions and go full speed ahead then it will lose its essence and cease as a nation. As for Ashwood, she's precisely the type of monarch that I'm going to fight against in the upcoming referendum for the Republic. Her ideas are idealistic; court nobles using their wealth and power to improve society but much like human nature and reality, they don't have an obligation to do that. Iran had their nobles but they did little in improving the lives of the lower-class. The majesty is certainly quite the reformer but I will keep an eye on her."

After the success of the Nojeh Coup; Iran becomes a transitional regency, hybrid (military) regime which clamps down on everything politically Islamic. Now suffering from an Afghan-like insurgency from the Quds and MEK, and intricate deep state politics between the Gang of Four.

The "Persagonian Republic" is a misnomer. We are a transitional regency.

"I do recall commending Sven's crusade against those demons that dare think they have the right to us as their playthings. However, while my compliment still stands, Sven believes Humanity has the right to claim the mantle of responsibility over the galaxy. That is something I disagree with, it was and will always be the Zeffarians, not the Humans. They are too rebellious and even wicked in some cases to hold that level of responsibility and trust to no offense of their own, as that is just how they evolved as a species. As Zeffarians much like my friends in a certain nation, we are orderly, compliant, and above all else loyal to the bitter end with betrayal simply being unthinkable and antithesis to our way of life. This is how we evolved and persisted through the eons to now, and this is why we are the only race that has the ability to hold the mantle. He can protest or even make us enemies. In the end, the result is that Zeffar will prevail in taking back its cosmic throne that was wrongfully stolen from us."

It's just...vile, detached from righteous fury or desperate survival. Those who blind themselves with petty personal gains are not fit to lead the whole. There is no place for such capitalists in Yona's perfect vision. I will see to it that their assets are all seized by the Yonacarian government to be repurposed for military use, and the profiteers are all lined up and shot, all of their friends lined up and shot, all their families are lined up and shot, anyone who sold food to them lined up and shot. Such creations are were originally an idea for our nation, but quite frankly, the primitive nature of their designs lead us to focus on genetic engineering instead. And look at that, a computer born pre-programmed with a few encyclopedias in their head thinking they're the new omnipotent being. Frankly, we're not impressed, primarily just at the concept of a robot accepting the divinity of a physical being. I mean, even our most primitive super computing AIs have been able to determine the unlikelihood of any central creator with a physical form even being capable of existing.

We hope that the spirits of the universe can work to teach you the futility of worshipping a living being, but quite simply, we doubt the concept will enter into the head of a machine designed to be servile. Or at least we assume you were designed in such a way, since your conduct makes the few digital minds in our audience scratching their metaphorical heads. But at the end of it all, we aren't exactly impressed by your role, we have no idea what accomplishments you could have made, and the only part of your personality we were able to recognize is the basic quest for knowledge that most Artificial beings posses.

Nonetheless, we have no real qualms with you personally, and we wish you the best on whatever endeavors your nation may seek to put you on."

"As someone on the throne myself, I have known of many monarchs who claim to be descendants of some god or another, but to see an actual divine ruler is something else. Born in the Heavenly Kingdom, descended to Earth and raised as a human in an aristocratic family? I'd almost imagine this to be some sort of movie, perhaps my own daydream, or both!

She seems to be capable enough of a leader, but I'm concerned about her decision to have her origins revealed to her subjects. Although I understand the importance of such events for her legitimacy, wouldn't that further separate her from the common people? But I must say her actions reassure me somewhat; she appears to care for her people the best she could given her circumstances and society. Overall, her appearance as refined and empathetic is enough to warrant my respect if nothing else."

"Greetings, your majesty... I admit, it is simply perplexing for there to be a socialist monarchy or a noble prancing around in socialist terminology but actions speak louder than ideological purity. I must wonder what drove a family of aristocratic nobles to take an interest in an ideology that doesn't believe in nobility or classes but it is a testament to their conviction in striving for the welfare of the people. Noble titles or not. She is a communist but it takes a long journey to become one. As of now, she's band-aiding the people's suffering with welfare and a more permanent solution must be reached. Yet, I don't know what to think of this "Socialist Republic". In which point, it is better to throw off the facade and renounce your royal titles. Because a contradiction within an ideology could not sustain itself. Believe me, Futurism in Patagonia learned it the hard way."

The Avant-Gardist State of Patagonia ~~~ Gauchos and Mapuches, orgies and parties, avant-garde art, futurism, syndicalism, the New Man, general strikes, the glorification of violence, spiritual nationalism, esoteric occultism, CIA spooks, Spartanian homosexuality, public sodomy, and more

Triomphe du Surréalisme (1968)

- There are many things said about Patagonia but few actually know what goes on behind the Andes mountains. Tales of human depravation and man's inner darkest self run wild. A place where avant-garde culture flourish and the artist don't fear the censor. Where all live bold and free under the gaze of the Patron. Yet all dreams will come to an end soon...

"Premier Montgomery is a breath of fresh air compared to the chaotic tragedy that is... or, it would seem, was Le Patron. His young nation is situated at what may as well be the antipode of my island and is no less distant from the beating hearts of the world, but he does not enjoy the same isolation as myself, with neighboring powers seeing his land of ideals as something to be quashed or exploited. Most pressing in my mind - and his, it would seem - is the black plague that is Dirlwanger, who ravages the lands to his east and seems intent on spreading his filth to the Southern Cape. I will concede that Montgomery does not have the strongest odds when it comes to his polity surviving the chaos on the continent, but I do wish him the best of luck. As for the Premier's actual policies and the state of his nation, I must say I do approve. While concepts of futurism and, I will admit, democracy are not in practice here in Ketorushima, I believe they are proving to be the best path for true peace and prosperity for the humans of what was once Patagonia, provided that Lawrence and his soldiers can protect this experiment. It is rather beautiful indeed to see something so hopeful coming from futurism after Le Patron made the word bring up images of ash and turmoil. Though Ketorushima does not apply the human principle of democracy to its governance, at least not in a traditional sense, I have done my utmost to protect the freedoms of my people and I hope Montgomery may continue to do the same. My overall opinion is very positive."

Arctic island inhabited by kitsune and other yōkai.

Set about a decade after the world becomes aware of the supernatural. Details on that will come later.

Slowly trying to rework the factbooks and write for this nation again. Sometimes I worry I'm bad at writing but I think I'm getting better
