Sounds like a cheaper version of PHM-era Nine Inch Nails.

My music taste more or less completely shifted. Right now, I'm trying to backtrack and see if there's anything I still like from my old stuff.

I mean, we can actually create a mathematical definition for evolution in terms of the evolutionary algorithm and then write code to deal with abstract instances of evolution, which basically equates to mathematical proof that evolution works. All that remains is to show that biological systems replicate in such a way as to satisfy the minimal criteria required for evolution to apply to them, something which has already been adequately shown time and again. At this point, we've pretty much proven that not only can evolution happen, it pretty much must happen since it's basically impossible to prevent it from happening.

Mine has changed a lot in some ways, and others I still like a lot from my childhood. Like Eyvind Kang, and Faun Fables, for a few examples. But there are some things I look back at that I liked and I'm like "Oh god why?!"....

*Fives for The Elder Scrolls reference*

It depends, really. I was busy going through my playlists to organize them better, so I was going through a ton right then. There's usually a few songs I listen to a day that I don't even post on here, too. Any time I'm going through music I haven't listened to before, I post every song I'm listening to...because? It is a good way to get my post count up . Pretty much if I'm at my computer I'm listening to some music in some form or other. Though there are the days I just listen to not much of anything, or don't post much because I'm listening to stuff I've posted I've been listening to enough, and I'm just listening to music while I'm doing other things.
