Ja Rule (ft. DMX and Jay Z) – It's Murda

Damn, Ja Rule was actually good before he became a commercial sellout.

So it's Rap rock? It's actually a fairly popular mainstream genre.

Bleeker Ridge - Small Town Dead

Post-grunge, hard rock. Simply glorious. From the album Small Town Dead

This may be more hip hop than rock, but I always thought it had sort of a rock sound to it...so I thought it might be the same song.

Crystal Castles-Magic Spells

Album: Crystal Castles

Genre: Uh, I just call it a weird form of synthpop, but I think they get referred to as "Witch House" or some nonsense.

Puddle Of Mudd - Psycho

Alt hard-rock, from the album Famous

Nickelback - Edge of a Revolution

Post-grungey hard-rock, typical of Nickelback, but this a political song, which sets it apart from their earlier material. Currently released as a single, to be released as part of the upcoming album No Fixed Address

Sugarhill Gang, Rapper's Delight.

Normally, I don't like rap music. But, given the fact that this song is over thirty years old, I'm not sure that it's anything at all like rap music today.

Ja Rule - Only Begotten Son

no but i finally found it. the stupid music ap i use to find music from anime half the time doesnt give me the artist or album. but thanks for helping ^^;; ohh and its "Battle Scars (Plugless version)" by David Whitaker.

if you decide to search for it ill most likely have japanese characters in its tittle. but it should be in english.

ohh and "Hard to See" Five Finger Death Punch.

There's plenty of good hip-hop/rap music now. But just like with anything, you tend to have to look beyond the radio play stuff
