Both cases are fundamentally criminal assault, which carries a penalty of imprisonment for up to 2 months or a fine of up to Th. 1.600 or DM 800 based on current (1977) exchange rates. But of course punching the head of government typically carries a bit more weight. I'm not sure how you managed to get past the schutzdienst unless you caught the Generaldirektor at the eisdiele, but it's safe to say you're in for a long questioning at the ÖSB.

To the discontent of most, not a crime, though the gun does have to travel separated from you.

Exposing someone to an excessive amount of radiation and just leaving them there, made to soak it all up until they leave?

If they Die, Firing Squad. If they are Highly Injured, 20 Years. If they somehow are not injured at all or are just a little injured, 1 Year.

Firing a Leopard 2PL at your nations largest bank in a Terrorist attack, killing your leader who was inside as well as the entire Military Command.
