Being a Vigilante?

Not a crime in and of itself. Every citizen is taught to exercise the police powers inherent in their rights as an individual. The activities are a normal part of the social order as long as said occupational vigilante is a law abiding citizen that adheres to the ethics of, and has joined (or is joining) a professional association (such as the Commonwealth Justicar Association). Outlawry (those who commit highway robbery, brigandry, piracy (on the open water), and perfidy) are capital offences for which declarations of Persona non Grata and rewards for capture are given. A vigilante who goes rogue is usually gunned down unceremoniously by lawful authority.

Not a crime, but a matter of safety. Person is remanded to a psychiatric facility for evaluation and then sent to a sanitarium or asylum until such a time as the person is no longer a danger to himself.

Illegal, either a $200 Rostorian dollar fine on the minimum end and jail time of 1 year to lifetime depending on what they sell.

Drugs will result in a fine and a year of jail, selling knives will result in a bigger fine and 3 years of jail. Weaponry will result in 20 years of jail, and selling explosives is life in prison.

Large fines depending on the products stolen, any damage they may have caused during said robbery, and of course, any potential injuries or deaths of innocent bystanders. At the very least, the robber in question will also have to perform at least a year's worth of community service as a form of restitution, and at the opposite end, up to 19 years of imprisonment in a correctional facility if multiple grave injuries or deaths were caused during the commission of the robbery.

Orchestrating a massive breakout of an entire prison's inmate population, successfully freeing every single prisoner from their cells and allowing them to rush out into freedom.
