You said Theory of Deadman..... sucks?

If it sucks so bad, then why am I listening to it now, and a second time too by the time I submit this post.

Come on, Corrian. Are you going to tell me that song sucks!? *glares at you*

Today is the day we find out if Corrian is someone who values honesty as a virtue. All he must do is admit he does like Theory of a Deadman but for that one song. ☐

Eyvind Kang & Tucker Martine - Bright Shadows Occulted

That hurt, man. Granted they do have some pretty terrible songs that make you forget they actually have great songs, but they have a few great songs.

But right now, I am listening to a favorite of mine: Weezer- Buddy Holly

An attack one is an attack an all. You're not alone in this conflict.

Here's a song specially delivered to you here to be used for your enjoyment. It will sooth the pain Corian inflicted upon you when he said Theory of a Deadman sucks.

The one song I know by a Theory of a Deadman I think is terrible, yes. I shouldn't say all of them sucks since I don't know all of them.

Sounds an awful lot like Nickelback.

I don't like Nickelback.

Though that song is not nearly as bad as Bitch Came Back or newer Nickelback. Nickelback used to be better, too.

Right now, all I have left is like, long songs by Eyvind Kang, so going to listen to something else...if anything left has short songs.

"Short" meaning under 10 minutes.

The new Kayo Dot album also has quite a lot of black metal influence as well. It was rather unexpected, but I liked it.

Also, if you do check out Gorguts...the debut Considered Dead is straight-up grimy old-school death metal. I personally love it, but I don't know if it's really your thing. The new album Colored Sands is much more experimental and technical and more modern sounding. It's also really good. I would recommend either of those two albums, depending on your tastes.

Kayo Dot is pretty good. They definitely vary a lot, and that new album is no exception.

I'm not sure if any of Gorguts is my thing, from what I've heard, but I'm still trying to expand my tastes in the metal realm, and Gorguts seems like a good start.

Gojira is definitely more accessible than Gorguts, that's for sure. Definitely give From Mars To Sirius a listen. Or even The Way of All Flesh. But I think you'd like FMTS.

Amorphis - "Enchanted by the Moon"

See, I haven't really been a fan of death metal, but that's why I want to listen to some of the most highly received death metal bands. Because I like challenging myself.

Accessible isn't really a problem as long as they're on Spotify, which I know Gojira is.

I meant accessible in terms of how easy it is for a non-metalhead listener to enjoy it. Like how you'd say Coldplay is more accessible than maudlin of the Well for most people out there.

I wouldn't call myself a non-metalhead, though. I have quite a lot of metal lying around in my ridiculously large playlists.

Speaking of. Spotify finally got their thing back saying how long playlists are (because they removed it for some dumb reason), and apparently my post-rock playlist is 135 hours long.

maudlin of the Well-The Curve That to an Angle Turn'd

I think I listened to the wrong album first. Interlude 1 and 2 are on the other album that was released in the same year as each other. Interlude 3 and 4 are on this one.

Yeah I noticed that too. I wonder why they ever took it off? And damn, that's a lot of post rock. I have a post-rock playlist too, but I don't think it would even reach close to 24 hours...

If I had a playlist for all of my metal it would be interesting to see how long it would be haha. But I don't, I listen to so much metal that I break down my playlists into all the obscure sub-genres.

Beats me. I get the feeling they got enough complaints that they put it back on.

And damn, that's a lot of post rock. I have a post-rock playlist too, but I don't think it would even reach close to 24 hours...

I only add like half the album onto the playlist per album, too. An 8 song album? 4 songs. Though if it is a 4 song album or 6 song album, I still do 4. And always even numbers. So a 10 song album is still 4. Don't ask me why I do that, it is just a good way to organize the favorites of the genres I guess.

The playlist has over 1,000 songs in it.

Though I think some of the post-rock bands would probably bore me more then when I first listened to them, because now that I've found so many unique post-rock bands, some of the more generic ones may interest me less.

I plan to do that once I get more of specific genres.

Right now, I just have "Metal playlist", which is surprisingly 389 songs long, since I haven't really dug into metal a TON yet.

I'll probably split it into Sludge Metal, Black Metal, and so on eventually.

I also have a playlist that is just "Electronic", despite the fact that varies widely.

My punk playlist has 0 songs so far.

Get some Black Flag, Bad Religion and Dead Kennedys into that punk playlist, boy! ☐

Also, I'm the opposite. I don't have enough time to listen to music. My list of things to listen to keeps growing longer and longer and I struggle to find time to sit back and listen to music. Life of a college student, I suppose.

Mine kept growing and growing where I got so backlogged until I finally managed to mostly control myself with keeping things under control. Now I go through more bands then I add.

Still, I added Julia Holter and Chelsea Wolfe both recently.

Grand Theft Auto 5 apparently has a fairly good punk mix. Suicidal Tendencies, Black Flag, and some other name I can't recall my dad mentioned and was surprised was on their punk station.

Edit: The other one was Off!
